New Technique Smashes Huge Nazi Air Raids

British Fliers Trap Nazi Planes Between Two Layers Of Planes

NAZIS ARRIVE IN WAVE AFTER WAVE

New British Plan Takes Them By Surprise And Gets Results

By FRANK BUTLER
International News Service Special Correspondent

ON THE SOUTHEAST COAST OF ENGLAND, Sept. 18.—Employing a brand new technique by which Nazi raiders are trapped between two layers of deadly machine guns and anti-aircraft batteries, the royal air force today literally smashed two huge formations of German planes which crossed the coastline headed for London.

The Germans sent what appeared to be thousands of aircraft swarming over the coast in this area, themselves using a new mode of approach. Instead of coming over in mass formation, the Nazis today arrived in wave after wave from airports in Holland, Belgium, France, Germany and even from Norway.

R. A. F. Was Ready

But the R. A. F. lads were all ready and waiting for them.

Long before the warning sirens announced the approach of the German raiders the British pilots in their Hurricanes and Spitfires had taken off and were circling about high in the sky in two layers—one so high as to be scarcely visible from the ground even with binoculars—

Jessie Reed Is Taken By Death

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—Jessie Reed, 43, once New York's glamor queen and rated one of the highest paid members of the late Florenz Ziegfeld's chorus, died in poverty today.

A form of anemia from which she had suffered for several years proved fatal, despite blood transfusions. Many offers of blood were received when it became known that the onetime beauty was desperately ill and without funds.

Five times married, she was found living in a $5 a week room in Chicago in 1935. Attempts to rally her strength and try a comeback since that time were unsuccessful.

President To Issue Order To Establish Local Draft Boards

By JACK VINCENT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—President Roosevelt today planned to issue an executive order within the next 24 hours providing for establishment by Oct. 10 of local boards to administer the new draft law in every state, county, city and town in the United States.

Regulations To Be Made

Mr. Roosevelt also planned to place in effect a sweeping series of regulations to aid the 6,500 local boards in interpretation of the compulsory military training act, which calls for registration of 16,500,000 men between the ages of 21 and 35, inclusive, on Oct. 16.

Officially, the executive order will give the joint army and navy selective service committee, which has been in existence for four years, legal status to administer the vast draft machinery.

Mr. Rosevelt also prepared to make known shortly his selection for the post of director of the draft board. Lt. Col. Lewis B. Hershey, executive officer of the army and navy committee, seemed the likeliest candidate for the $10,000-a-year position.

Governors To Name Boards

Once these steps are completed, the draft board will clear the appointment of the local draft boards. Mr. Rosevelt will make the appointments on the recommendations of governors of the states. The local ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 18.—After weeks of attack on miscellaneous issues, the campaign of Wendell Willkie for the presidency appeared today to have settled in a definite grove—the third term issue.

Willkie preached "no third term" at Albuquerque last night. He preached it at Amarillo and Lovis, N. M., and Vaughn, and Mountainair and Belen during the day. At Tulsa and Claremore, Okla., and Coffeyville, Kan., the day before and today he headed for Phoenix, Ariz., to discuss it again.

"I am not an indispensable man," he told 20,000 persons here last night. "I have not the slightest doubt in my own mind that this democratic system in America has produced thousands and tens of thousands of men who are qualified to occupy any position of trust.

"There are thousands who could make as good a president as I can or as good as Franklin Roosevelt.

"Yet there is one man in this country who says 'I am the only man who can lead this country.' Frankly, I don't believe it.

Barrage Balloons Make Wild Flights

Forty British Defense Balloons In Flight Across Sweden; Swept By Gale

(International News Service)

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 18.—Forty British barrage balloons, torn loose from their moorings by a gale sweeping in across the English Channel, ripped across Sweden in wild, uncontrolled flight today.

Carried up the Straits of Dover and across the Jutland Peninsula, the huge balloons and their trailing steel cables broke telegraph, telephone and power lines.

Electric train service and tramcars in Stockholm were brought to a halt when the lashing cables cut through power lines. Some Swedish towns were left without electric power entirely.

Swedish anti-aircraft gunners went to work on the "invaders" and at last reports had shot down most of them, although high winds made the twisting, curving bags difficult targets.

At Jonkoping, one of the steel cables tangled in the weathercock of a church, bringing the top of the steeple down with a crash.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 18.—A formal proclamation, unprecedented in the peacetime annals of the state, is expected to be issued today by Gov. Arthur H. Following the lines of the president's proclamation, which set October 16 as the day on which all men between the ages of 21 and 35, inclusive, must register, Governor James will ask state, county and local officials to volunteer their services in administering the draft.

Election officials are expected to be asked to serve without pay "as their contribution to the national preparedness program." Typists, stenographers and other clerical help, many of whom will be taken

Rome-Berlin To Consider Role Of Spain In War

Von Ribbentrop Goes To Rome To Consult With Italian Officials

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop left Berlin for Rome today for important consultations with Italian officials regarding Spain's ultimate role in the European conflict.

While Spain's actual entry into hostilities is not anticipated for the present, informed German circles said that more active cooperation among Germany, Italy and Spain in the Mediterranean may soon be looked for.

(Editor's note: Authoritative quarters in London were not disposed to regard the Spanish situation with undue seriousness. German versions of Spain's future actions, particularly with regard to Gibraltar and Portugal, were felt to be "highly speculative" and go further than circumstances actually warrant.)

Events in the war are moving at a rapid pace, both as regards England and Egypt, it was said in Berlin, and Spain is now anxious to solidify herself in the axis camp.

Rome Reports Advance Made In North Africa

(BULLETIN)
(International News Service)

ROME, Sept. 18.—Continued advances by Italian troops in North Africa while preparations were made for a new concerted offensive were reported today in an official communique which told of smashing Fascist air raids on British strongholds.

The communique said:

"Italian and Libyan troops continued their victorious advance in North Africa and occupied Sidi Barrani which is 100 kilometers (about 60 miles) as the crow flies from Cyrenaica and immediately began to build up a new base for attack.

"These Libyan troops have proved their high war virtues as well as their absolute loyalty toward Italy.

"The obstinate resistance of the enemy which was supported by armored units was broken everywhere.

"Our air force repeatedly bombed and machine-gunned enemy bases.

"Five enemy airplanes of the Gloster type were shot down in flames, and destruction of another machine is probable.

"Four of our own airplanes did not return to their bases.

"During the course of night-long attacks on Benghasi and Derna we destroyed a pontoon and torpedo boat in the former harbor and caused several large fires in the latter. A steamer at Derna also was slightly damaged."

Large Type Bombing Planes To Be Purchased In United States

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Negotiations under which this country will release an undetermined number of giant long-range bombing planes to England are virtually complete, a source close to the administration disclosed today.

Official announcement of the plans is expected shortly. Under them, Britain will be able to obtain the huge Boeing bombers which the United States hitherto has declined to release.

The planes which the Boeing company will be permitted to sell abroad are the B-17-B type, which cost $250,000 each and have four powerful motors, enabling them to cruise for 3,000 miles at 300 miles an hour and to climb as high as 25,000 feet.

Air Minister Says British Plane Losses Reach Total Of 621

Claims Nazis Lose 1,867 Planes During Same Period Of Time

(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Since the German blitzkrieg against England began on August 8 the royal air force has lost in action over Britain, France and the low countries a total of 621 planes, Sir Archibald Sinclair, air minister, revealed in a speech today.

During that same period the Germans lost 1,867 planes, he said.

While the British in that time lost less than 600 airmen, crews of the destroyed aircraft, the Germans lost nearly 4,000 pilots, gunners and bombardiers, Sir Archibald declared.

In the fighting against Italy during that same period, the R. A. F. lost 15 aircraft but destroyed 56 Fascist planes, the air minister said.

Sir Archibald also revealed that the Germans have been dumping British-made bombs, presumably captured in France, on English cities. He said that bomb fragments collected from a huge crater in an airdrome in Kent were found to be those of a British-made bomb.

Nazi Bombs Drop Near U. S. Embassy Building In Latest London Raids

(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Two delayed action bombs fell near the United States embassy building in Grosvenor Square during the terrific German air raid on London during the night, authorities revealed today.

Late this morning one of the bombs already had been removed but the second remained—unexploded—where it fell.

British authorities said they considered the embassy building was not endangered by the bomb.

Personnel of the embassy was not evacuated and all departments this morning were doing business as usual.

United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy was not in the building when the bombs fell.

However, the embassy night staff, including several prominent officials, spent a grim night in the building listening to German bombs as they whistled down on Oxford street and the patter of shrapnel on the embassy roof-top.

One member of the embassy staff told International News Service that nazi bombs which struck the fashionable Bourne and Hollingsworth and John Lewis stores in London's West End whizzed overhead.

Everyone in the building, he said, thought they were going to land squarely on the building.

In recent days a number of bombs have fallen within striking distance of the embassy, but those that fell nearby last night were described as the "closest yet."

New Friction In Balkans Likely

Indications Of Soviet Pressure Against New Government Of Rumania

BORDER CLASHES OF TROOPS REPORTED

By GEORGE BALINT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BUDAPEST, Sept. 18—Indications of new Soviet pressure against pro-axis Rumanian government of Premier General Ion Antonescu, coupled with reports of plans for German-inspired reorganization of the Rumanian army, today gave rise to possibilities of Russo-German friction over the territorially depleted Balkan state.

Reports of new border clashes between Soviet and Rumanian troops accentuated the mounting tension, and reports from Bucharest said Moscow had demanded demilitarization of the Rumanian frontier zone in Moldavia which adjoins the territories of Bessarabia and Bukovina, ceded to Russia during the summer.

At the same time, reorganization of the Rumanian army after the model of the German military machine appeared imminent with the disclosure that German General Tippelkirscher had arrived in Bucharest.

Meanwhile, the Balkans faced another possible crisis as the result of territorial ambitions on Greece and Yugoslavia.

Announcement is made today by Lloyd W. Strayer, chairman of the Lawrence County Board of Public Assistance, of the resignation of James W. Moorehead, executive director, effective September 30. The board at its meeting, Tuesday evening, accepted Mr. Moorehead's resignation.

Republican Gain Seen In Wisconsin

Big Vote Polled By G. O. P.; One Roosevelt Democrat Defeated

(International News Service)

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 18.—Tabulation of ballots in Wisconsin's primary today showed a strong upsurge of Republican votes in the G. O. P.'s comeback effort and apparent defeat for at least one prominent Democrat running under the Roosevelt banner.

With nearly two-thirds of the votes in yesterday's primary counted, Republican candidates in most contests ran up a total far in excess of the combined totals of both Democrats and Progressives, indicating a continuation of the gains scored by the G. O. P. in 1938.

The voters apparently nominated James E. Finnegan, former Wisconsin attorney-general and opponent of New Deal policies, on the Democratic ticket for U. S. senator, emphatically rejecting John Cudahy, American ambassador to Belgium and pro-Roosevelt "write-in" candidate.

Finegan polled 11,810 votes on the incomplete returns to 1,890 votes for Cudahy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Democratic and Republican party organization candidates successfully beat off virtually all independent threats in yesterday's New York state primary, one of the most apathetic elections in years, the unofficial returns showed today.

Daylight Raids Meet Strong Resistance By British Planes And Defenses

(BULLETIN)
(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 18—Chancellor Hitler hurled at least 2,000 nazi warplanes against England today in a daylong series of futile attempts to penetrate Britain's defenses, but the Royal Air Force turned most of them back in furious air battles along the coasts.

Spectacular aerial battles still were in progress along the southeast coast as dusk fell, and it was claimed that the German losses were "very heavy."

LONDON, Sept. 18.—For the hundredth time since the war began, Londoners took to the air raid shelters at 4:10 p. m. today (11:10 a. m. E. D. T.)

The new air raid alarm, the sixth of the day, sounded soon after an endless series of attacking squadrons totaling at least 300 German planes swept across the southeast coast and headed for battered London.

The "century mark" in Nazi Germany's unrelenting effort to destroy London and its ten million population was reached while rescue workers struggled to reach the victims of last night's prolonged series of raids and firemen fought to subdue flames in widespread areas of the country.

Nazi Invasion Bases Attacked

(BULLETIN)
(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Heavy new Royal Air Force attacks on German invasion bases were announced today in an air ministry communique which said:

"R. A. F. medium bombers were again over Zeebrugge and Ostend yesterday afternoon. Direct hits were made on harbor installations at Ostend and ships were bombed at Zeebrugge.

"One of our aircraft attacked four barges off the coast. Direct hits on two were obtained.

"Another raider bombed a convoy off the Hague. The new airdrome at Ymiuden also was attacked.

"Two Messerschmitts engaged our aircraft at Zeebrugge. Both were driven off."

Hundreds Search For Missing Boy

Disappearance Is Not Solved

State Motor Police Head Search—No Clues As To Boy's Fate

BOY MISSING SINCE SUNDAY

(International News Service)

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Sept. 18.—Completely baffled as to what may have happened to him, more than 1,000 searchers today pressed determinedly onward in their hunt for tiny, two-year-old Ronald Rumbaugh, who disappeared Sunday.

"We haven't a thing to go on but conjectures. There are several possibilities as to how he disappeared, the most probable of which is that he wandered further from home than we thought possible, or that he was struck by a hit-and-run driver."

Theory Abandoned

A third possibility—that the child may have fallen into the hands of sex maniac—has been abandoned by police, it was reported. Authorities said they were holding a man under suspicion of indecent exposure, but insisted there was no connection between the cases.

Ronnie was last seen when his father, Ralph Rumbaugh, 33, ordered the child back into the family yard when Ronnie started to follow him to a baseball game Sunday. His mother, Mary Edna Rumbaugh, 30, first noticed the boy's absence and when a cursory search failed to reveal him, asked for help from police, firemen and Boy Scouts.

Hampered by fog and heavy underbrush, the search is progressing slowly, but is covering the immediate vicinity of the Rumbaugh home thoroughly, police said. The distraught mother, who has four other children, wearily told reporters:

"I don't know. I don't know. I don't have the slightest idea of what could have happened to Ronnie. He never stayed away from home before."

Taxing war profits is right, but why apply the tax to all business and prevent expansion of non-defense industries?

boards will be set up as soon as possible, within the next week or 10 days. All will be established well in advance of registration on Oct. 16, if plans go on schedule.

This is necessary because it will be the duty of the local boards to shuffle and number the cards of registrants. It also will be the duty of the boards to forward a master list of numbers and names of conscripts to Washington through state headquarters. Each board will handle 3,500 conscripts.

National Lottery

After the master lists are in Washington, a national lottery will be held to see which conscripts are to serve first. This lottery probably will take place between Oct. 23 and Oct. 26. President Roosevelt may draw the first number.

Local boards then will be advised of their quotas—the number of men that each board must furnish for the first contingent mustered into the army for a year's military training.

Army officials clung to plans to call up 75,000 conscripts by Nov. 15, a total of 400,000 by Jan. 1, and a total of 800,000 by next April. There was threat of delay in calling up the first contingent because barracks may not be built in time.

In this case, conscripts called will be ordered to hold themselves subject to call. Thus conscription will proceed without a hitch, although there may be some delay in getting conscripts into camp.

HITLER'S ASSAULTS IS NOT BREAKING ENGLISH MORALE

28 days of cruellest punishment. At this moment the 99th alarm of the war has sounded, and as I write the terrifying screams of sirens floods our ears. But nobody halts work and somewhere next door a radio continues to broadcast a jolly Scottish tune.

Everybody knows there is absolutely no real security against Hitler's indiscriminate bombing because every section of London has been hit. But everybody realizes that by now there is no use of worrying.

Now the west as well as the east ends of London, the rich as well as the poor, are getting it and the rich are proving they can take it as well as the heroic working class of Limehouse and Mile End road.

Picture of Scene

To get a picture of one sector of London today picture yourself in a large department store in your town. Visualize it hit from ceiling to cellar by an enemy who blindly dropped two Molotov "breadbaskets" filled with incendiary and high explosive bombs.

You realize as you watch firemen flooding blackened walls five stories high that this would be accounted by any insurance company as a total loss amounting to many millions.

With the other spectators you laugh as you see firemen staggering out with female show-window dummies clad in the latest cute underwear. You are amazed to see adjacent shops already within a few hours restoring their window glass.

Would this sort of bombing make you feel like surrendering?

Would you say: "Let's give up in order to save other stores?"

London Answers "No Surrender"

London's answer was violently negative as its citizens watched smoke pouring from John Lewis' department store, one of the largest high quality stores in the world.

This sort of destruction certainly is not going to win the war and today after touring the city's principal markets I can testify that the German radio's claim that the Luftwaffe is gradually starving London is simply imbecile.

If there is any shortage in Covent Garden, London's biggest and most famous market, it's invisible to the naked eye. It takes just as long now to thread one's way through its lanes and alleys piled mountain high with every variety of food as it ever did in peacetime.

True, every time I go away and return to my hotel there are some more windows shattered (Knickerbocker lives at the famous Savoy on the Strand), but I can still eat as well there as in any of the best hotels in New York and dancing goes on every evening in a luxurious shelter far below the ground.

According to Prime Minister Winston Churchill, it has taken the Luftwaffe two weeks to kill and injure around 10,000 of London't population of from eight to ten million.

At that rate, as a London statistician cheerfully reckoned today, leaving out of account the natural increase in population, it would take Hitler around 2,000 weeks or 40 years to exterminate London.

But Hitler is now past 50 and nobody expects him to live another 40 years. Londoners thus feel they have mathematical proof that their glorious city cannot be beaten.

There's one comforting thought about the Day of Judgment. Congress can't delay it with speeches or mess it up with amendments.

the other layer only a few thousand feet above the earth, acting as decoys.

The Germans, sighting only the lower layer, took altitude to obtain the advantage over this group, not even suspecting that high above them lurked the higher-flying group of waiting fighting planes.

Between Two Layers

The German squadron roared their way directly between the two layers of British planes and then the battle began.

Time and time again British airmen dove from the heights upon the surprised Nazi fliers, forcing them down in confusion to an altitude where the spitting machine guns of the lower layer could reach them.

Then the decoy layer of R. A. F. planes battered the Germans still further, forcing them down to still lower altitudes where the anti-aircraft batteries on the ground whammed away at them.

Twice during the day I witnessed this strategy in action. Each time the R. A. F. completely smashed the formations of German planes.

No Argument For Third Term

"There is no argument anyone in this audience can advance to me in favor of a third term that I can't take and make out of it a better argument for a fourth term.

Conflict of Traditions

Willkie began hammering at the president's third-term drive with his speech at Amarillo, Tex., yesterday. The southland, he declared there, faces a conflict on two great traditions, one of traditionally voting Democratic and the other the tradition that no American president shall seek a third term.

"So I put it up to you very frankly, people of the southland," Willkie said. "You have two great traditions. There is complete conflict between them and you must measure which you hold most sacred... And if there was ever a time in the history of democracy when we should preserve all of its forms and all of its traditions, it is now."

During the course of his Albuquerque speech, he first set the stage with the third term issue and then attacked New Deal spending as 'the worst drunken spending orgy in the history of the country.' He also criticized the increasing federal debt, continuing unemployment and the conduct of the national defense program.

"We have a public debt approaching 50 billion dollars," he said. "If you elect this administration to another term, the public debt will rise. Elect this administration and you'll have four more years of depression.

Can't Stand Much More

"Democracy can't stand much more of that.

"We cannot pile depression on depression, debt on debt and have this democracy survive."

Willkie made two promises to his Albuquerque audience to be carried out if elected.

"I will promise America something—I will promise honest jobs for honest work," he said, and on national defense he promised:

"I shall call in the ablest production men in America and I shall give them temporary jobs and create of them an independent agency charged with the responsibility of building quickly a national defense so strong that no dictator will ever dare to strike."

The president, Willkie charged, "doesn't know any more about production than any other man who never had anything to do with production." And of the operation of the national defence committee without a chairman other than the president, he said, "you can't run a committee and put on a church social without a chairman."

Has Gruelling Schedule

Willkie set up another gruelling schedule for himself today—even more rigorous than his program yesterday which began in the early morning with a speech at Amarillo and ended some 12 hours later with a press conference, reception and speech in the ballroom of his hotel after his speech to the largest audience Albuquerque ever has seen. During the day he also made four rear platform speeches.

Today Willkie was to cover three states by plane, train and automobile and make nine speeches. The first speech was in a Phoenix park, an air trip from Albuquerque. Then he was to fly to Riverside, Calif., and drive to San Bernardino to again board his special train and make a rear platform speech.

Subsequent rear platform speeches—and Willkie makes speeches of them and not mere greetings—were scheduled for Riverside, which he will touch by train as well as plane, Corona, Fullerton, Anaheim, Orange and Santa Ana with a half hour speech off the train at San Diego where he will end a ten-hour day.

STATE PREPARES FOR DRAFT MOVE

from the classified civil service lists, will be paid, it was understood, by the federal government.

To Name State Director

Appointment of a state draft director is the next important step on the governor's program. It was understood that this official, who is expected to be a civilian, will not be named by the governor until after President Roosevelt has chosen a national draft director. The state draft director, who will be paid by the federal government, does not have to be approved by the president, but all other draft personnel, including the assistant draft director and draft board members, must receive the president's approval.

The selection of civilian members of the draft boards, of which there will be 420 located in all counties and large communities, is the next important step but the governor has until October 9 to submit their names to the president.

As the draft boards cannot function until after the men have registered, the governor has ample time in which to select their personnel.

Thousands Would Serve

A book containing the names of thousands of citizens who have volunteered to serve has been placed in the governor's hands by the adjutant general's office. From this list and from the hundreds of other persons who wrote directly to the governor offering their services the governor will select three men for each draft board, along with legal and medical assistants.

In addition, the governor will name five members to each of seven appeal boards to be located in Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Scranton, Williamsport, Altoona, Pittsburgh and Erie. These boards will hear the appeals of men whose requests for exemptions were denied by the local draft boards.

Once the state draft director and his assistant have been named, a state draft office will be set up to direct the draft machinery in Pennsylvania. Approximately 3,000,000 registration cards and other printed material needed in carrying out the draft will be distributed to the local draft boards by this central group, which is expected to set up headquarters in Harrisburg, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

With all preparations complete, approximately 1,500,000 men will troop to the election polls on October 16 to register. Their registration card will be forwarded to the 67 county clerks who in turn will distribute them to the 420 draft boards in the state.

INSECTS' SUPPLY OF OXYGEN

Insects have no lungs and do not breathe through their mouths. Air is drawn in through minute holes or spiracles in the body segments and passes through an intricate system of branching tubes or trachea, carrying oxygen direct to all parts of the body.

BRITAIN TO BUY HUGE BOMBERS

the planes to help carry her bombing raids deep into German territory.

Although the number of planes which will be released was not disclosed, congressional quarters have asked that 30 of the giant bombers be turned over to England.

Advocates of this latest aid-to-England move contend that the United States has a still later type of this plane, and that production has now been stepped up to a point where this country can afford to permit the manufacturer to dispose of some of the planes abroad.

One reason why our refugee ship came through "heavily mined waters" was because Germany was bluffing about having the waters mined.

ANNOUNCEMENT
of Interest to Women
WE are pleased to announce our appointment as exclusive local dealers of the famous Dickerson shoes for women. We consider these shoes the best fitting and most comfortable women's shoes made.
The Arch-Relief models are light, dainty, fashionably styled shoes for dress-up occasions—notable for their comfort at the ball of the foot, where most high-styled shoes cause tenderness or callouses.
The Archlock models are trim "duty" shoes, with lower heels and an arch-supporting feature—for women with weak arches, or those who must spend long hours on their feet.
We are showing a complete line of both of these well known Dickerson brands. Come in and let us prove that authentically styled shoes can be truly comfortable.

HEROISM THAT SILENCES CAVIL

HEROISM in battle is understandable. Men go "all out" in the heat and impetus of tremendous events. But we have to stop to figure out these British "Suicide Squads"—the engineer detachments assigned to poke around London and dig up unexploded Nazi time bombs.

One of these squads, working four days, unearthed an 1100-pounder buried 27 feet below ground at St. Paul's Cathedral. They loaded it gently on a truck. The lieutenant in command took the wheel. They sped through London and tossed it out into a marsh, where it made a crater 100 feet wide when it exploded.

What that would have done to St. Paul's can readily be imagined.

This kind of work, and there must be a great deal of it going on, is heroism of a higher degree. Every minute that squad worked the men composing it were nudging eternity. Time bombs are not clock-work propositions. When they let loose is determined by the time it takes for acid to work through an oxidized plate. If the plate is thin the time is short.

The most violent Anglophobe will have to hail these fellows who faced death for many critical hours to save Wren's masterpiece.

AUTHORITY ON EAGLES

In the death of Dr. Francis Hobart Herrick, professor emeritus of biology at Western Reserve university, Cleveland, the American eagle lost its greatest friend and defender. Dr. Herrick spent much of the adult period of his 81 years studying the bird that is the national emblem of the United States. He even went so far as to sleep among eagles.

While studying a giant eyrie at Vermillion, Ohio, he erected a platform in a nearby tree on which he slept in a tent. Thus he could observe the birds at dusk and dawn. This eyrie was blown down in a storm in 1926. It weighed two tons and had been occupied since 1890, if not longer. Study of the nest disclosed that eagles add to them during tenancy.

Eagles are model birds, Dr. Herrick learned, as they will live as much as 30 years in an eyrie, if undisturbed. They spend about six months a year cooperating in raising their young.

The good doctor disputed stories about their carrying off lambs and children. They live on fish, rats and rabbits. Honors and degrees had been heaped upon Dr. Herrick by universities everywhere, but his name will be perpetuated more by his devotion to the eagle than by any of the other of his splendid achievements.

MILITARY CONSCRIPTION EFFECTS

Now that it has been settled by Congress that a draft will make available for military duty the young men of America from 21 to 35 years of age, inculsive, an estimated total of 16,500,000, the United States will soon witness a process with which Europe has long been familiar. That is the diversion of manpower for extended periods from private enterprise to compulsory government military activity.

This diversion will not soon be manifest. The initial plan is to start late this year filling in the sketchy ranks of the National Guard and the Regular Army with conscripts. Less than a hundred thousand will be called out late this year and about 800,000 in the first six months of next year.

But selective military service will eventually take hundreds of young men out of a community such as New Castle. Most of them will be removed from jobs. They will have to be replaced in industry. Just as the belligerent nations have cancelled out unemployment by a concentration on war, so America will find its unemployment ranks somewhat reduced by this conscription remedy.

There will be some effect on purchasing power as youths who contribute to community spending are removed.

This nation's command of large military forces in peace time can easily revise sharply its foreign policy and lead it into directions hitherto undreamed of. It will require utmost vigilance on the part of Americans throughout the nation, and unceasing demand, to be certain that these huge "defense forces" remain just that.

GET READY TO PAY THE BILLS

As the armament program swings into gear, the biggest question facing this country is, "Where are we going to get the money?"

The expenditures which have lately been authorized or considered dwarf anything in our history. Close to $15,000,000,000 has been voted for national defense purposes, and the best estimates indicate that the total figure will touch $25,000,000,000. And even that marks only the beginning. The vastly expanded army, navy and air forces must be maintained, and the cost of that alone will probably come to about $7,000,000,000 a year.

So far, congress has almost completely side-stepped the financing problem. It has extended the $45,000,000,000 debt limit by authorizing the issuance of $4,000,000,000 of national defense bonds—a step which provides no permanent solution whatsoever. It has passed new tax measures which will produce about $100,000,000 a year in new revenue. And it is now considering an Excess Profits Tax which will raise in the neighborhood of $200,000,000 a year if passed. All of that is simply a drop in the bucket. And, as hard statistics prove, it is impossible at this time to raise enough money by taxes to pay for current expenditures. For, if you took every dollar of net income made in this country, on the basis of 1938 figures, the total would be only $16,000,000,000.

What, then, is the answer? It is two-fold. First, it is no longer excusable for this country to spend $8,000,000,000 a year for "regular" government activities, along with the other billions required for defense. Many political projects and budgets and bureaus must be cut or eliminated. Our program of waste must be changed to a program of thrift, individually and nationally.

Second, the national income must be increased in order that we may retire our debt, just as we paid off most of the World War debt between 1920 and 1930. That means that we have to get rid of artificial, punitive restrictions on business—so that business may go to work and put the unemployed to work. A national income of $90,000,000,000 or $100,000,000,000 must be attained if we are to provide for today's gigantic expenditures without destroying our standard of living.

We can't dodge the issue and pass the buck any longer. We can't make this country secure until we have a fixed, long-view fiscal policy and a definite plan for paying bills.

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

GUARD BABY'S FIRST TOOTH

The first teeth are formed in the jaw before the baby's birth. The mother's diet during pregnancy and while nursing the baby determines the soundness of the baby's teeth while they are being laid down in soft tissue.

Foods for the pregnant mother adequate in vitamins and minerals as recommended by Mendenhall are: "1 quart of milk, one egg, one raw vegetable salad, such as lettuce, celery and tomato, one citrus fruit, one cooked green vegetable, two slices entire wheat or graham bread or 1½ ounces whole grain cereal. If a helping of lean meat, potato, and three servings of butter and cereal or bread are added to these foods, a diet sufficient in calories and adequate except possibly in iodine, will be furnished a normal mother.

"More fruit and vegetables may be substituted in place of carbohydrates if the energy needs to be curtailed." Some experts would add one-half teaspoonful of cod liver oil. However, every pregnant mother should have her diet checked by a physician.

Best Preventive

As a preventive of tooth decay (caries), Dr. Park has written: "I believe that if pregnant women received ample well-balanced diets, in which green vegetables were abundantly supplied and cow's milk was regularly taken, and kept a sufficient part of their time in the open air and sun, and if their infants were placed in the direct rays of the sun for a part of each day and were fed cod liver oil for the first two or three years of life, more could be accomplished in regard to the eradication of caries of the teeth than in all other ways put together, and that rickets would be abolished from the earth."

Dr. H. Kent Tenny, Jr., in that fine new little book, "Let's Talk About Your Baby," says:

"Now that he is getting enough teeth for cutting and grinding operations, it is well to encourage him in their proper use. . . But you will find that civilized teeth are not used hard enough. Among the Eskimos, who use their teeth for just about everything, including the softening up of frozen boots, tooth decay is very rare.

Things To Chew

"So give your baby things like zwieback to chew and later on encourage him to eat toast, rye crisp, and crackers rather than soft bread and teach him to chew his meat vigorously and thoroughly. As to cleaning the teeth it is well to start the habit early and remember that it is the grinding surface that need most attention. When he is two and a half or three years old take him to a dentist who appreciates the importance of children's dentistry, and thereafter keep in frequent touch with him." The Myers' children began going to the dentist when they were two. Before ten they were making and keeping their own dental appointments.

It is important also that the child have proper diet during the years before the permanent teeth erupt. Faegre and Anderson in "Child Care and Training" give a chart showing the average time of eruption of the various groups of temporary and permanent teeth.

A selected list of books for expectant parents may be had by writing me at 235 East 4th Street, N. Y. City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Q. Would you punish a child to make him say Please or Thank You?

A. No; I should patiently work to make him want to exercise these courtesies.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

CUPID'S ARROWS VS. GUNS

With all the audacity he displayed in outwitting locksmiths as per the old legends, the little guy with the arrows and three-cornered pants is outfoxing and laughing at the might god of war. Threatened with interruption of romance through the calling of young men to the colors, Cupid is staging an effective advance blitzkrieg of his own in the marriage license bureaus of the nation.

From California to Maine, the wedding rate has upswung remarkably during the last few months. Some cynics hold that Dan is scaring young men into rushing to say "I do" before Uncle Sam says "You'll do." But that seems a crusty, sourpuss viewpoint, applying to a small minority. No doubt the uncertainties of the times have caused many engaged couples to advance their wedding dates so that they may be sure of happiness together, even if brief, in an unpredictable world. And unluckiness in love looms only for the few lads who may wed solely to escape a draft.

If and when the little lady finds out she was wooed through such selfish and unromantic motives—and ladies' intuition is uncannily sure in this field—the bridegroom may long for the tranquility of life among tanks and dive-bombers.

All such speculation is beside the point, however. The important, cheerful thing is that Dan Cupid once more is demonstrating that he has the power to blitzkrieg anything and everything, now and forever, that may interfere with his plans.

"I worry constantly about my nose which is retrousse—'saucy' my father says — in comparison with my sister's. He says she has a 'cameo profile'. Her mouth is mall while mine is very generous and pouty. Do you think I should consult a plastic surgeon. I will be eighteen next month."—Jane.

This letter just in from a girl in the suburbs I have answered thus: I earnestly believe that a survey of men's preferences would show that many more of them would prefer retrousse noses at a saucy angle and full pouty lips to cameo profiles. My dear girl, after you have seen more of life you will have observed that marriage comes oftener and more successfully to your girl chums and friends who are just fairly good-looking than to those who are glamour girls. There was never a truer saying than that "beauty is in the eyes of the gazer." I can call the roll of those I went to school with and mark practically all of the homely ones happily married while a much greater proportion of the beauties have found it hard to make a go of matrimony. So, Jane with her irregular features and horn-rimmed spectacles has just as much chance of holding her husband as her glamorous sister who won the crown at one of the beauty pageants. Perhaps your sister will need a plastic surgeon before you will—one to give the corners of her mouth an upward, merry tilt and erase the selfish lines from around her eyes.

Other Readers' Questions Answered

Question: I am to be a bridesmaid at a friend's wedding. What are my duties?—Julie.

Answer: You will have no duties in advance of the wedding, unless you might care to help with the decorations and the bride's selections of her trousseau, if she asks you to assist in these matters. You and the other bridesmaids should meet at the bride's house about a half-hour before the ceremony to receive your bouquets and possibly to have your photographs taken with the remainer of the bridal party. You will then leave in an automobile for the church, if it is to be a church ceremony. You have no duties during the ceremony other than looking your very best. After the ceremony you go to the reception to take your place in the receiving line.

Question: Would it be proper to send an eighteen-year-old boy a birthday present. I met him while on a visit when I was a child. We have had no contacts since then until recently when we begand to correspond. He recently sent me a birthday gift and we have planned to meet soon.—Betty.

Answer: Yes, by all means send him an inexpensive gift.

ECHO OF 1918

War-time letters are usually pretty serious but some of the most seriously intended ones appear humorous to others. We recall one World War note that always put us in stitches. Like to see it? Here it is:

"Dear Ginral Sir: My husband was induced into the surface 18 months ago and I ain't received no pay since he was gone. Please send my elopement as I have a four-months old baby and he is my only support and I kneed every day to buy food and keep us in clothes. I am a poor woman and all I have is gone. Both sides of my parents are very old and I can't expect anything from them. Do I get any more than I am going to get? Please send me a letter and tell me if my husband made application for a wife and child and please send me a wife's form to fill out. I have all ready written to the President and got no answer, and if I don't here from you I will write uncle Sam about you and him. Yours very truly. MRS.——

Sabath And Bloom Are Outstanding
Head Important National Committees
Both Men Have Fought Their Way To Top

By CHARLES P. STEWART
American Press Columnist

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—American Jewry has a good right to be proud of its representation in congress. Of its faith it has had two members of the lower legislative chamber at the head of a couple of the house's most important committees during the just-ending session and their work at the current critical juncture in the world affairs has been outstandingly competent.

The pair are Chairman Adolph J. Sabath and Chairman Sol Bloom, respectively of the rules and foreign affairs committees.

They're both veteran lawmakers. Congressman Sabath, the "father of the house," is just ending his seventeenth term; Congressman Bloom is ending his ninth. The former's a Chicagoan; the latter's a New Yorker.

Two Vital Committees

The rules committee is the most powerful group in the house of representatives. It virtually dictates what proposed measures shall come before the house for consideration. Generally speaking it can smother those it disapproves of, and facilitate action on those it favors.

Naturally such authority could be abused by a little coterie of 14, if it weren't exercised with the utmost fairness. Chairman Sabath's fairness has next to never been questioned.

The present committee's power was vested mainly in the speakership until the chamber deprived the speaker of it, back in "Uncle Joe Cannon's day, and turned it over to the rules committee's guardianship, and its chairman practically runs the committee.

The senate has a rules committee, too, but it hasn't the other committee's potency.

The foreign affairs committee always is important, but just now, with the international situation what it's been under today's conditions, its importance is tremendous.

The Pair's Backgrounds

Sabath, by birth a Czechoslovak, came to this country in his youth, developed a law practice and graduated onto Chicago's municipal bench. He was a local institution in the city courts in my early newspaper career in that city. It literally mourned his loss as a magistrate when he was elected to congress, although it was itself that elected him. He's a congressional liberal even ante-dating George W. Norris in the senate, though I guess George preceded him a trifle in the house of representatives.

Scarcely needful to say, he's a Democrat—or he wouldn't be a committee chairman in a Democratic congress. He also is a loyal New Dealer, but no brain truster.

Sol Bloom always has been a business man. And a darned successful one. He's one of the richest lawmakers on Capitol Hill.

He's a native of Pekin, Ill., and he started with nothing. He was a news kid subsequently in San Francisco. Gradually (and not so blamed gradually) he broke into large scale commercial life, landing presently in Gotham, because he wanted a major field to operate in. He wasn't a mere speculator; he dealt in substantialities.

But Sol, as he piled up his millions, didn't turn reactionary. He's remained liberal; not, however, overly radical. He's a New Dealer, like Sabath, but no excessive one.

He knows foreign affairs like nobody's business. He knows 'em, not by academic study, but as a result of having traveled all over the world, drawing his own conclusions. He did this after he'd made his money, just to amuse himself and family. Then, having gravitated into congress, and being already interested in the subject, he slid automatically into the house's foreign affairs committee and ultimately rose to its chairmanship, by right of seniority and competency.

It's well recognized in congress that Chairman Sabath and Bloom have made good on their jobs—and then some.

HAPPY COUPLE

They do not mean they've always been
Untouched by care or stormy weather,
They merely say from day to day
They've braved all things of life together.
They tell us they were happy years
In spite of heartache, hurt and tears.

And if we were to pin them down
Who say their days have all been pleasant,
We'd find misunderstanding's frown
And doubt and fear had oft been present.
For what they mean is they'd been glad
In spite of all the cares they'd had.

Glad that the frowning didn't last,
Happy in spite of loss or grieving,
And once the stormy day had past
Each in the other still believing.
Troubles and differences? Yes.
But summed up now as happiness.

The Judge Reassures Us

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.

IN DEALING with the third-term issue, which the Roosevelt managers not unnaturally, would like to rule, out of the discussion in this campaign, the Republicans ought not to overlook the comment on this subject by Judge John E. Mack, made some days ago at Hyde Park, where the President and he both addressed a meeting of the Dutchess County Roosevelt Club.

THE judge's comment is worth a wider attention than it got. Judge Mack, is that old friend of Mr. Roosevelt's who nominated him in 1932, and again in 1936, and who, as his most reliable journalistic mouthpieces asserted, the President had picked to nominate him for a third time last July. This schedule would have been followed but for developments which Mr. Eddie Kelly, the Chicago boss, and Mr. Eddie Flynn, the New York boss, thought made it unwise. They could not make their plans for the big Roosevelt convention demonstration fit in unless Alabama led off by presenting the Roosevelt name when the roll call started. It was essential that Mr. Kelly's Sewer Commissioner in the cellar of the convention hall not be delayed in his stentorian blasts of "We Want Roosevelt."

SO, because of the exigencies of the situation, Judge Mack was sidetracked and had no chance to proclaim the overpowering virtues of his hero until the Hyde Park meeting. But there, with the President on the platform, he extolled him as the wisest as well as the most righteous of men, and, according to the New York Times, concluded his address by declaring that Mr. Roosevelt had just told him that he has no intention of being a candidate for a fourth term. This was no slip of the tongue upon the part of the good judge, as he then went on to explain that the President did not really want to run for a third term and had told him so six months before the convention. He was, said the judge, "drafted" against his will" but "he already has told me he will not run a fourth time."

PERHAPS Judge Mack is not much of a political figure. He is, however, one of Mr. Roosevelt's oldest friends and one to whom he talks intimately. When Judge Mack says Mr. Roosevelt told him he would not run for a fourth term, it can be accepted that Mr. Roosevelt told him exactly that. This, of course, is not an important statement, but it does shed light upon the Roosevelt mind and it draws attention once more to certain facts about his third-term candidacy which the White House strategy is designed to blur.

FOR one thing, it indicates the extraordinary conceit of Mr. Roosevelt, who already assumes his re-election for a third term, and among his cronies has been talking about whether or not he should run for a fourth term. This in itself is illustrative of the state of mind of the President, whose whole attempt to break the two-term limit for Presidents, which has prevailed in America for 160 years, is based on the theory that there is no one else in the United States qualified to govern the nation save himself. That is the only excuse for the third-term campaign. It is this assumption

The Human Side Of The News

(By EDWIN C. HILL)

Copyright 1940 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

We get a whisper from the Sybil's cave where lurks the grim and purposeful Clarence Bedington Kelland that the Willkie people are going to spring a big New York parade a few days before election day which will revive the spirit of '96.

There's nothing cryptic about that. That was the year of the great Sound Money parade up Fifth avenue. Its golden river of yellow hats, banners and chrysanthemums swept underfoot the heresies of the fiery William J. Bryan, who was just then belting the Money Devil and throwing a scare into the conservative East from which it has never quite recovered. The parade magnificiently dramatized the ideals, fiscal and political, of the founding fathers, and its rip-roaring success was credited with having accomplished more in putting down the silver-tongued interloper than any other effort in these parts.

As we understand it, the Willkie management is planning a bang-up old-fashioned torchlight turn-out, with old-fashioned bands playing old-fashioned tunes, banners proclaiming old-fashioned ideas, with horses instead of automobiles and all the properties and trimmings of a grand old 1896 whoop-te-doo as Hollywood might stage it. They will rally the spirit of the old America, flaming above all the heresies and political innovations of this—to them—quite cockeyed day.

Whether they do it or not, it is grooved right down Bud Kelland's alley. Probably there is no man in America who has suffered more acutely from the goings on at Washington than has Mr. Kelland and there is no doubt that he has his heart in his work as he fans up the name and fame of Wendell Willkie for the Republicans.

Through all the Rooseveltians in which Mr. Kelland has been a captive in Potiphar's house, his Agamemnon statue stunt has been routine at the annual Dutch Treat Club show. There will be a majestic statue of Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson, or some other of our illustrious great, beautifully done in the semblance of gilt or marble, in a simple, impressive stage setting. Then the statue starts talking and man! what it says about this Franklin D. Roosevelt, the bureaucrats, the lenders-spenders, the payroll mob, the bloodsuckers, parasites, me-too boys, porch-climbers, fuzzy professors, fanatics, tax-eaters and termites at Washington! Ssssh! We'd have to print it on asbestos paper!

The odd thing about it is that Mr. Kelland, incidentally one of the cleverest writing men in America, does all this elegant plastering in the vein of a stately recitative—in the manner of a very sore founding father writing for the Federalist.

Whether the Republicans or the Democrats put it on, one of those 1896 parades would hop up this campaign a lot and perhaps revive spirited political faith of one sort or another among us.

We get from an old-timer, still on a newspaper copy desk, the story of the Tenth Ward McKinley-Hobart parade which just about blew the lid off the old town. There were bands, transparencies and torches, such as those in that authentic new hit movie, "The Great McGinty."

A big, ruddy, resplendent Irishman named Mike McGillicuddy was running the show. He was a popular man and got a cheer whenever he stopped the parade to set off some fireworks and make a speech. He wore a big, loose tailcoat, and Roman candles and pinwheels had worked out of his pockets and into the lining until he was literally upholstered with fireworks.

"Mike's got dynamite in his shirt tail," a policemen remarked as the great McGillicuddy set off a skyrocket and took a bow, to the cheers of the crowd. The policeman was quite right. Mike exploded everywhere all at once, but the curious result was that it merely blew his pants off. He took a dive up an alley, pantless, and General Michael Kerwin, an impressive personage on a big bay horse, took over the parade.

Although mounted, the general was in mufti and wore a high hat. Just as the parade re-formed and fell in behind him someone aimed a sky-rocket carelessly and it nailed the general squarely in the plug hat. Somebody jumped the rocketeer and that started fights going all up and down the line near the Tenth Ward Athletic Club in Tenth street. There were also a half dozen runaways. But they finally pulled the parade together again, with only a few hospital and jail cases and everybody cheering madly for McKinley and Hobart at the end. Could Messrs. Bud Kelland and Charley Michaelson pep up this campaign a bit? We begin to crave action.

YOU'LL like the size of this trim new Buick SPECIAL for '41—its room, its softer ride, its Permi-firm steering, its fresh smart style and all that.

But what you'll go for is what happens under that broad bonnet—the thrill and the thrift you get from that husky, big, 115-hp. Buick FIREBALL* Eight.

For in each flame-packed cylinder of that silk-smooth power plant a flaring ball of fire is set off with each spark-leap.

Packed to higher compression than ever before, fuel gives up more power and more mileage — power when you need it, economy throughout the whole driving range.

Indeed, so great is the power at your command that at 30 you use only one-eighth of the energy at your disposal. All the rest is there waiting for pick-up, hill-climb and sudden getaway.

Even at 50 you use less than one-quarter of your available power, and at 75 still have nearly half "on call" for emergency use.

More than that, to this engine you can likewise add Compound Carburetion—and step up both power output and your mileage. At 30 you'll get nearly one and one-half more miles per gallon, at 50 almost two, and at 70 an extra mile and one-fifth.

But that's just one side of the story—the facts side. Only one thing will give you the stirring feel of Buick's thrill-packed behavior on the road.

That's a demonstration — and it's yours for the asking. When will you be in to ask for it?

*According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, a super meteor which travels with a series of explosions like the shock waves of a great projectile is called a "FIREBALL."

Red Cross Board Hears Reports

Activities Of Chapter Are Reviewed As Monthly Meetings Are Resumed

HAVE RECEPTION FOR DR. SHARPE

Meeting in the Chapter House last evening, a full report of the activities of the past summer were presented to members of the executive committee of the Lawrence County Chapter, American Red Cross, showing an ever increasing amount of work which is being accomplished.

The meeting was preceded by a cost supper, served by the Canteen, of which Mrs. William L. Cosel, is chairman, when Dr. Albert Sharpe, assistant director of first aid for the American National Red Cross, was tendered a reception by the board.

At the business meeting, it was reported that the War Relief Fund raised by the chapter now totals $13,233.15, with an additional $500 being added to this by the Ellwood City branch. Letters of appreciation were voted to Ross Rosenberger and William A. Francis, who headed this successful effort during the early part of the summer.

Resolutions of respect to the memory of Harry Alexander, an active member of the Red Cross board since the days of the World War were recommended, and a committee was named to draw these up.

Complete reports on the various activities were submitted by Mrs. John E. Elliott, chairman of volunteer service; Mrs. John W. McIlwraith, chairman of the motor corps; Mrs. L. E. Springer, chairman of the Ellwood City branch; Miss Thyra Fulton, director of home service; and Rabbi Norman Diamond, chairman of home service.

The home srevice report showed 141 veterans cases acted upon in the last month, with 482 units of work being done on these cases. This work has increased practically 100 per cent since June 1, Rabbi Diamond stated.

REYNOLDS AND SUMMERS

AIR RAID ALARMS IN LONDON PASS HUNDRED MARK

and Royal Air Force planes tried to turn back the invaders, but some apparently got through and penetrated close enough to the capital to necessitate a new alarm.

As the trek to the now familiar shelters began, word reached London that at least ten of the attacking planes had already been destroyed.

Terrific Combats

While German raiders tried time and again to reach London during the day, British ground batteries and fighting planes roared into action and terrific air combats developed over southeastern England at dizzy heights.

London took a heavy battering during the night, arousing fears of increasing numbers of deaths and injuries. Bombs narrowly missed the United States embassy and two delayed action missiles fell near the building. But American diplomats and officials there carried on business as usual.

Britain's air force struck back with redoubled vigor as the war in the air seemingly approached a state of total frenzy.

An official communique stated:

Attacks On Nazis

"Last night the R. A. F. carried out large-scale attacks on shipping concentrations, barges and communications in enemy-occupied territory and on certain targets in Germany itself."

(Editor's Note: A Berlin announce said British planes attempted to pentrate German territory but were driven back by anti-aircraft fire.)

London's fifth alarm of the day and the 99th of the war sounded at 12:47 p. m. (7:47 a. m., E. D. T.).

It came as the German air force persistently attempted to break through to London, where night bombers before dawn sent down showers of bombs that again endangered Westminster Abbey, blasted three famous Oxford street stores and famous Lambeth market place.

Using small formations of bombers—ten or more in each—heavily escorted by fighting planes, the Germans came over in waves but were checked on each occasion by strong anti-aircraft fire or strong R. A. F. pursuit plane patrols.

Four times during the morning the German planes were turned back before coming within striking distance of London.

But after the fifth alarm sounded furious air combats were witnessed over the outskirts of the capital. The planes dived and circled at terrific altitudes while their exhausts left fantastic patterns trailing in the sky.

The Great Game Of Politics

which is the whole foundation of and the sole justification for the effort to keep Mr. Roosevelt in the White House, for twelve instead of eight years.

BUT even, more interesting than Judge Mack's reassurance about the fourth term is his assertion that Mr. Roosevelt was "drafted against his will" for the third-term attempt. There is no doubt that Judge Mack believes that. And unquestionably there are other innocent and uninformed people who believe it. But Mr. Roosevelt cannot possibly believe it, although that is the pose which his third-term candidacy forces him to adapt. It is probably true that Mr. Roosevelt told Judge Mack six months before the convention that he did not want a third term. It certainly is true that he told Mr. Farley in August 1939 that he would not be a third term candidate. Just when he made up his mind to try for a third term no one but himself knows. The best guess is that it was in January of this year. What every posted politician and political observer does know is that for five months before the convention, Mr. Roosevelt was actively conniving in the movement to renominate himself. The overwhelming and convincing evidence of this was when, after a White House conference, Eddie Kelly, the Chicago boss, entered Mr. Roosevelt's name in the Illinois primaries.

AFTER that none save the uninformed believed that Mr. Roosevelt was not forcing his own renomination, although there were those who believed to the last that he would not accept. The facts that the "draft" at Chicago was phony; that Mr. Roosevelt dictated the action of the convention over a special telephone wire to his special representative, Mr. Harry Hopkins; that it required all his power as president, plus the Kelly-Flynn-Hague machinnes, to crush out the party opposition and put his nomination over, these facts are too well established to need repetition. They can be proved up to the hilt. Even some of his most devoted friends were disgusted at the fraudulent character of his message to the convention and the fakery of the whole draft performance. One of them—Mr. Raymond Clapper, whose admiration for Mr. Roosevelt has been great—denounced his message as untruthful" and wrote that "up to the time of that message I had faith in Mr. Roosevelt. I have so no longer."

WHEN these things are recalled, the bland statement by Judge Mack that Mr. Roosevelt has no intention of running for a fourth term and really did not want to run for a third term, are insulting to the intelligence and that variance with the facts. No one would want to accuse Judge Mack of insincerity or deceit. Undoubtedly he believes what he says. But the man of whom he spoke and who sat on the platform, beaming acquiescent, could not believe it—that is unless he has self-hypnotized himself to an almost incredible degree.

Dr. Dafoe's Column On The Quintuplets And The Care Of Your Children

(Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WALKING

It always seems to be a matter for boasting when a baby begins to walk at an earlier age than the baby next door. That is unfortunate, for it encourages parents to coax a child to walk before it has the inclination to do so itself. Parents who do so act very unwisely.

A child should not be urged to begin to walk. It doesn't matter if little Johnny Jones next door, who is the same age, has been walking for a month, while your baby hasn't begun. Don't urge him, even though you think he is old enough and strong enough to be taking steps. He'll begin trying first steps in his own good time, which is the best time.

Prematurity, severe illnesses—particularly rickets, nearly always postpone a child's ability to walk and to stand. Children of multiple births are often slow about walking and standing. Other factors make walking ages vary.

In the Dionne Quintuplets there was every one of these adverse factors. They were born two months prematurely, they had rickets, and they had digestive disturbances when they were very young. I was surprised that they learned to walk as soon as they did. Yet at the time many persons were critical of our babies because they didn't walk as soon as youngsters normally do.

I always advise mothers, "Don't use any contrivance to try and make your child walk. When his bones and muscles are sufficiently developed, he will be only too eager to step out and try it without any coaxing on your part."

We observed this advice with regard to the Quintuplets. We were exceptionally anxious for them to begin to walk, just so we could show the people who were going around saying: "We always knew the Quins weren't normal."

Stories got out that the Quins were slow about learning to walk, and so well-meaning people all over the country began sending us especially designed walkers, supports contrivances of all kinds with directions how they could be used to hurry the Quins into walking. We refused them, because we felt perfectly sure that when their muscles were ready for the effort, they would walk by themselves.

When a baby stretches and threshes around in his crib, he is developing the muscles he needs for walking. When he is creeping about the floor, he is also developing these muscles. So the more creeping he is allowed to do, the better. Soon he will creep over to the table, or to the chair, and with the aid of his hands, pull himself up to a standing position. He may do this a long time before he takes the first step. Don't get impatient. Strained muscles and deformed bones may result from forcing him.

One thing that may slow him up in his progress from this point is being overweight. A too fat baby is likely to have trouble when he starts walking, for his little bones at that stage of development are not strong enough to carry his bulk of flesh easily. He may suffer from bad falls.

Don't worry if your healthy, vigorous child is "unsteady on his pins" at first. He is unsteady because he lacks co-ordination. You do not realize, perhaps, how many muscles must work together in the apparently simple process of walking erectly and gracefully. Abdomen, buttock, shoulder, trunk, leg muscles all play their part. When they don't interact smoothly, then you have an uncertain gait.

DAILY DOZEN

(From the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania)

Every year 1,000 Pennsylvanians die of appendicitis.

This is because the appendix is allowed to rupture.

There are more appendicitis deaths today than 30 years ago.

Deaths from uncomplicated appendicitis are very rare.

But the death rate from ruptured appendicitis is 50 per cent.

Generally this is the result of unnecessary delay.

Delay frequently is based on ignorance or fear of operation.

Use of purgatives and laxatives is a chief cause of rupture.

Such disturbing medicines agitate the inflamed appendix.

Education of the public is the answer to this problem.

With abdominal pain never give a laxative or physic.

Give nothing by mouth and call your family doctor.

Military Registration Cards Will Be Carried By Men In Age Limits

By HARRY WARD
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—The nation's compulsory military training program promised to make Americans a nation of "card toters" today.

You are already familiar with your social security card. Well, the 16,500,000 men who must register under the military training program will be forced to add another card—a registration card—to their collection.

Those eligible for service will have to carry their cards at all times or face mighty inconvenient situations. It's likely that the policeman who stops you for a traffic violation may ask for your military registration card, even before he asks for your driver's license, if you look like you're between the age of 21 and 36.

That's just one of the many ways that authorities will check up on draft dodgers.

At that, fewer men will register under the present draft than during World War No. 1. The total number of registrants then was 24,234,021. However, if you are eligible, the chances now are greater that you will be called up. The World War ended after only 2,810,296 men were mustered into the army. Under the present draft, about 4,500,000 will be called in for a year's training in the next five years.

Those eligible for service now will be divided into four classes, to be called up in this order:

1. Single persons without dependents.
2. Persons who hold jobs in vital national defense industries, including some jobs on the farm.
3. Persons with dependents, including married men with families.
4. Those specifically deferred by the act, such as ministers, some government officials, etc.

If you're married, it isn't likely you will have to go. The draft board expects that there will be at least 5,000,000 single men registering.

The government expects all persons to learn they must register by notice in the press and on the radio. In the World War, it was different. Deputy sheriffs and rural mail carriers were used to spread the word in remote sections. One army officer recalled that officials travelled as far as 200 miles to notify persons in the same county. It happened that the Grand Canyon cut through the county and the officials had to travel clear around it. Then, after all that trouble, they found only 10 or 15 men of registration age.

National Guard tank companies aren't being called up for service with their units under the year's training program. The reason: The army hasn't enough modern tanks to spare for guard training.

P. S.—The hours for registering on October 16, if you have to register, are from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. that's just so you won't forget.

BANKHEAD IS LAID TO REST

Late Speaker Of The House Is Buried In Home Town Of Jasper, Ala.

By GEORGE DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

JASPER, Ala., Sept. 18.—Speaker William B. Bankhead came to the end of a long and illustrious road here in his Alabama home town Tuesday afternoon, followed to the grave by President Roosevelt, most of the cabinet, other ranking government officials and nearly a hundred members of the house and senate.

Jasper, which knew Speaker Bankhead so well, was in deep and genuine mourning, as were the official dignitaries who had accompanied his body from the state funeral in Washington.

Final rites for Alabama's most famous son were conducted in the First Methodist church, of which Bankhead had been a member for years. The church was jammed to capacity as Rev. Dr. T. L. McDonald intoned his words of comfort to the widow, heavily veiled but bearing her hour of grief bravely, the speaker's daughter, Mrs. Eugenia Hoyt, of New York, and to his two brothers, Senator John Bankhead and Col. H. M. Bankhead, commercial attache at Ottawa.

All lands can be self-sufficient now. Whatever they lack, they just make a substitute out of soy beans.

Miss Mary Humphrey Honored By B. P. W.

Retired School Princial Presented With Honorary Membership

ELLWOOD CITY, Sept. 18.—At a social meeting last evening at the First Baptist church, the Ellwood City Business and Professional Women's club was proud to honor Miss Mary B. Humphrey, outstanding teacher in the community and recently retired principal of the Circle school, with honorary membership in the club.

Mrs. Clara Anderson presented Miss Humphrey with the membership and a lovely bouquet of roses and used the club symbol in her presentation. Miss Humphrey responded most graciously.

Mrs. Helen McKinney was in charge of the program, and she presented Miss Dorothy Young and Miss Helen Crowley, who gave reports of the 22nd annual convention of the B. P. W. clubs, held in Reading in June.

Miss Crowley stressed the address of Nettie B. Simms, national chairman of international relations, who has lived in European countries. She said that all European people want peace and they look to Americans to bring about world harmony. Women should be the leaders in attempting to keep calm and be ready to help in reorganization in the period of adjustment which follows war.

President Mrs. Betty Shiever conducted the meeting, during which an offering was taken for British relief work upon the plea of Mrs. Lee.

Thirty-three members attended and during the informal hour women of the church served a dainty lunch.

Tuesday, Oct. 1, a dinner meeting will be held.

Flower Show Is Most Successful

Garden Guild And Garden Club Combine For Fall Luncheon At Baptist Church

ELLWOOD CITY, Sept. 18.—Months of careful gardening by members of the Ellwood City Garden club and Garden Guild were amply repaid by the exclamations of praise and delight expressed by members and guests on Tuesday afternoon at the First Baptist church when the two garden organizations combined for a lovely luncheon and flower show.

Choice displays of flowers were artistically and cleverly arranged in every type of container. In the evening, the show was open to the public and was largely attended.

Covers were arranged for eighty-three members and guests at long tables prettily decorated with varicolored zennias and cornucopias filled with flowers and trailing vines, which was the work of the Garden club. By placing flower boxes filled with petunias and other flowers at the windows the Guild effectively transformed the dining room into a flower garden. The delicious meal was served by the church ladies.

President, Mrs. Dale R. Mason, conducted the meeting and presented Mrs. S. D. Pearson, New Castle, sponsor of the Garden club, and she introduced the speaker, Mrs. Lester Von Hofe, of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Von Hofe aided by Mrs. Stoner, Pittsburgh, judged the exhibits and in her talk explained why each selection had been made and offered suggestions for further improvements.

Much credit for the successful display is due Mrs. William Dean, of the Garden club, and Mrs. W. D. Manning of the Guild and their respective committees.

To Observe Fire Prevention Week

It is during this week that fire losses amounting to enormous figures are published. Fire departments check their equipment and activities and new methods are planned to obtain more efficient service.

The local fire department announces that they will participate in observing national fire prevention week and will publish a program of events as soon as plans are completed.

Large Crowd Attends Opening Of Third Annual Event On Tuesday Night

ELLWOOD CITY, Sept. 18.—An unexpectedly large crowd of spectators gathered at the Pleasant Hill grange last evening to view the various displays of the third annual fair.

There is a fine variety in the various displays and the judges, who were associates of the county farm agent's department, had a difficult time in selecting the winners. Included in the displays are exhibits of fruits, grains, vegetables, canned and baked goods, antiques, quilts and fancywork. Last year, the fair won the acclamation of the entire district and this year's exhibits are much more complete and elaborate.

The fair is open to the public again this afternoon and evening and a large crowd is anticipated. No admission is charged.

William Walton is general chairman of arrangements and he has been ably assisted by a cooperative committee.

Spirit Of Constitution Never Shall Fade, Lions Are Imformed

A renowned Pennsylvania governor—Benjamin Franklin—felt that "it would be such an honor to be asked to be President of the United States that the president should serve without any compensation whatsoever."

He took that stand before the nation's famed Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia, Attorney Alvah M. Shumaker told the Lions Club yesterday in a Constitution Day address in The Castleton. It was the 153rd anniversary of its adoption.

One of the convention leaders, too, fought unsuccessfully for a six-year presidential term—a term to which no president could succeed, Shumaker told his audience.

The speaker, discussing "Our Constitution," presented a comprehensive history of that great document, its original purpose and its usefulness throughout the years, and said:

"This parchment (the constitution) has grown yellow with age, but so long as we love liberty and freedom, there will never die, or ever for a minute fade, the great principles and spirit of our constitution."

Part Of Address

Attorney Shumaker said, in part: "The American constitution was written and adopted by men of ability and vision. In particular we are indebted to George Washington for his leadership as presiding officer of the Convention; to Benjamin for his sagacity and wisdom in smoothing out differences that arose among the delegates; to James Madison for his composition or writing of the document; to Alexander Hamilton in championing the ratification; and of course later to that great judge in the early days of the Supreme Court, that great expounder of the constitution—John Marshall. In more recent years in vitalizing and applying the constitution to the economics and problems of the Twentieth Century we are especially indebted to such judges as Mr. Justice Holmes, Mr. Justice Brandies and Mr. Justice Cordozo.

"Every schoolboy knows that the Constitutional Convention was held in Independence Hall in Philadelphia in 1787. Today, September 17, is Constitution Day. So I am asking you: What was it that actually happened on September 17?

"Prior to 1787 you understand of course that the 13 original states were operating under Articles of Confederation. This confederacy, however, while it had a Congress, was a weak sister. There was sentiment in favor of a national form of government. The Congress finally decided to do something about this and called a Constitutional convention. All of the states sent delegates except spunky little Rhode Island. This convention met in Philadelphia in May of 1787 and continued for four months until on September 17, the convention adopted a proposed constitution for ratification by the states and adjourned.

"As you can well imagine, much of the controversy in the convention centered on the economic rights of the citizens of the big states as opposed to rights and representation of citizens of the little states. The puny little states wanted as much voice in congress as the big states, but a compromise was finally agreed upon whereby Congress should consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives, in the Senate each state to have two representatives and in the House of Representatives the representatives to be elected on the basis of population.

"The Constitution adopted by the convention was a constitution of government, a government to be composed of three branches: legislative, executive and judicial.

"Under the proposed constitution these were the four great powers to be conferred on the new government: Federal taxation; power to maintain a standing army and navy; power to regulate interstate commerce; and provision for the admission of future states.

"While the convention had adopted the Constitution only after great debate and many arguments among the delegates, the greatest difficulty was prospective. Would the various states consent to it? The fact is that Rhode Island and North Carolina never did ratify the Constitution until after the Federal Government was actually operating.

"Pennsylvania was the first to ratify and consent to the Constitution but the vote of the special convention of Pennsylvania was 46 to 23, so you can readily see that there was opposition. In New York a majority of the delegates to their state convention were pledged against the Constitution but were swung over largely by the efforts of Alexander Hamilton.

"In the Virginia convention Patrick Henry denounced the constitution. He said that since the president was commander of the army and the navy, the president could make himself king. He maintained that what was needed was a bill of rights protecting the liberties of the individual citizens. Virginia adopted the Constitution by a narrow margin and James Madison promised to endeavor to secure approval of a bill of rights. He drafted what was desired in the form of ten amendments and sent the draft to governors of the various states.

"These amendments were adopted by the states almost contemporaneously with the adoption of the original constitution. They are part of our Constitution. And that is why it is said that our Constitution is both a Constitution of government and a Constitution of liberty."

Geneva College Opens Campaign

BEAVER FALLS, Sept. 18.—The pre-Centennial campaign for the first $500,000 unit of the $1,000,000 Centennial fund for Geneva college was publicly launched Monday night at a dinner attended by a group of 150 representatives of Beaver and adjacent counties that filled the spacious McKee hall dining room on the college campus.

The Honorable George A. Baldwin, chairman of the sponsors committee, presided.

Following the dinner, brief addresses were made. Robert M. Young of Pittsburgh, and president of the college board of trustees, spoke of the service that the trustees rendered gratuitously and devotedly. He told how the trustees had made a careful survey of the needs of the college, and that this study had led them to launch the campaign for the first $500,000 unit of the $1,000,000 Centennial fund as the very minimum to meet the needs of Geneva college for building, liquidation and much needed endowment and student aid funds. Mr. Young urged those present to be ready to go the limit with the trustees, alumni and other friends of the college to make Geneva a front line of defense of our beloved America.

Ohio State And Minnesota Have Standout Elevens

Notre Dame Will Be Tough Again, So Will Texas A. & M., Eastern Teams Weak

By LAWTON CARVER
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—If any one team in the country could be picked as the standout during the 1939 football season the vote would have to go to Texas A. and M., and the hard-riding Aggies may be tops again this year. This seemed to be the consensus today as another football season was about ready to make its annual entrance upon the sporting scene.

The mid-west will offer Ohio State and possibly Minnesota, the East Cornell, among others, the far west Washington, and the south Tennessee and Alabama as candidates for whatever honors may be passed around, but everything goes back to the Aggies and their chances sooner or later. That's from a national standpoint, with the Aggies defying a precedent which has seen to it that no championship team has repeated the following season. It may be that if the Aggies are knocked out of the race for national honors the knocking off will be perpetrated down in their own section.

Will Start Saturday

In any case, we won't be long finding out now, for there will be music in the air as early as this Saturday—the tentative first faint notes of a few college bands swinging out for the first time to the accompaniment of the usual ear-busting whistle blasts and clattering of molars under the impact of blocks and tackles that didn't miss.

On the coming Saturday there will be just a hand full of games, with twice that many a week later and with virtually all teams in action the following week.

And as we go into another season it is heartening to note that it won't be necessary to carry a football rules book to the first few games so as to catch up on changes made during the off-season. In contrast to most past seasons, the rules have been held over with scarcely an alteration. They have finally decided that football is a success as it stands.

Irish Card Tough

Where the best football will be played is a matter of opinion, but it won't vary as much as some would have you believe. The east will be somewhat off, which seems to be in keeping with modern custom, while the southwest—with the Texas Aggies or the team that beats them setting the pace—will be tough as ever. The south, midwest, and coast ought to be strong because they always are, and there hasn't been any changes in those parts of late.

This wouldn't be complete without presenting Notre Dame's schedule, as follows:

College of the Pacific, Georgia Tech, Carnegie Tech, Illinois, Army, Navy, Iowa and Northwestern.

The point is, the Ramblers will continue to ramble in 1940, and probably will upset many a cherished dream.

And by the way, who will land in the Rose Bowl?

Grid Bailiwicks Hum; Teams Gird For Coming Tiffs

Westminster College And Bessemer High Salute '40 Parade This Week

Lawrence county's grid bailiwicks are humming with activity as local elevens drill for games billed for the coming week-end.

The Westminster Titans are laboring like Trojans in Preparation for their lid-lifter with the Edinboro Teachers, Saturday at Edinboro.

Recuperating following their bruising tussle with Butler, New Castle's "Hurricane" is looking forward to the coming air battle with Youngstown East, Friday night, under the lights of Taggart stadium.

In the class B sector, the camps are sizzling. Forgetting an impressive session over Evans City High, Shenango Township High is girding for its second clash of the campaign Friday afternoon against Marion Township, away off near Fayette City.

In tumbling Evans City, 12-0, the East New Castle Wildcats showed a lot of promise. The backs, Cline, Denny, Stolitca and R. Donley, functioned in clocklike fashion. The wall resembles a miniature China wall.

Bessemer High greets the pig pelt sport Saturday, battling the rugged Hubbard, O., charges in the Ohio town. The camp of the red and black clad horde is extremely quiet these days. While little can be learned regarding this year's machine, Bessemer is in excellent fettle for the opener.

Union Township, which opened last week at Ellwood City, remains on the sidelines this week.

Game Commission Given More Land

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Sept. 18.—The Pennsylvania Game Commission announced receipt of a gift of 65.8 acres, for use as state game lands, from David M. Miller, former Allegheny county jurist.

Miller, who resides at Glenshaw, Allegheny county, upon hearing of the acceptance of his offer to the commission wrote Executive Director Seth Gordon as follows:

"I was very much pleased to learn that the offer of the tract of land at Glenshaw, Allegheny county, to the game commission of Pennsylvania for propagation and conservation purposes was accepted by members of the commission... I am pleased to give the land to Pennsylvania.

"I hope it will be the means of giving to sportsmen and lovers of the outdoors much joy and pleasure."

Lou Gunton spilled Vic Ross, 6-4 and 6-3.

New Castle Faces Tough Foe Friday

Youngstown East Bringing Almost Veteran Team Here For Battle Friday

Youngstown East High is bringing an almost veteran team here Friday night to Taggart stadium for their annual grid battle with the New Castle High "Red Hurricane". The kickoff is slated for 8 o'clock.

Coach Dick Barrett has had three weeks to get ready for the New Castle game. This will be opening game of the year for East High. East lost two speedy halfbacks in Barry McCullough and Don Lightner, the former joining a CCC camp and the latter having an injured ankle, but despite the loss of these two boys, East has a veteran backfield, losing but one man, Joe Vanasky, out of the backfield that performed here last year.

Clever Backfield

The East backfield will be composed of Nick Fabian at quarter, Talmadge Jackson and Jack Powis at the halves and Al Perl at fullback. Coach Barrett will use Louis Mastichelli, a sub fullback, who recently came home from a CCC camp, at tackle. He is a big strapping 200-pound lad.

Head Coach Phil Bridenbaugh divulged today that young Larry Roberts and Bobby Lee, colored halfbacks, had suffered injuries in the Butler game last Friday that may keep them out of the starting lineup this week. Roberts has a bad shoulder and has not practiced this week. Lee has an injured back.

There is no question that New Castle faces a tough engagement this Friday night and East High would love to avenge that 13 to 0 defeat handed them last year.

East High uses the Notre Dame system, which means but one thing—lots of deception and a forward passing threat at all times. East has beaten New Castle with an aerial attack in other years. With Roberts and Lee out of the New Castle lineup the local aerial threat is impaired.

ELLWOOD LEGION TO STAGE BOUTS

Babe Retardo And Mike Candella Signed For Feature Role

Mike Candella of Youngstown and Babe Retardo of Ellwood City will appear in the main bout of the American Legion's amateur boxing show which will be staged in the Lincoln high school gymnasium, Ellwood City, September 24. The show is a benefit for the legion to raise funds for the Armistice celebration.

Candella has fought in New Castle several times and Retardo milled here Monday night. The bout should furnish plenty of action. They weigh 126.

Billy Reale, the Castlewood plowboy, will take on Shed Bell of Youngstown at 160.

Russell Baxter, New Castle's latest pugilistic find, will box Andy Bennick of Youngstown at 147.

Other bouts arranged by Merritt Book, matchmaker, follow:

Roy Crews, Ellwood City, vs Johnny Zohosky, Warren, O.; Joey Yarosz, Monaca, vs Tommy Bell, Youngstown, 135; Rickey Loccisano, Ellwood City, vs Vic Ragatti, Warren, O.; Lloyd McKain, Warren, O., vs Tony Arkett, Ellwood City at 118, and Ossie Peglise, Youngstown, vs Clint Brown of Grove City or some other 118 pounder if Brown is unavailable.

Fishing Violators Are Given Warning

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Sept. 18.—Violators of the state's fish laws today were warned by the fish commission that they were liable to arrest even though offenses occurred on private, posted land.

In an opinion requested by Commissioner of Fisheries C. A. French, the justice department explained that wardens were justified in entering posted land "when they have reasonable cause to believe that the fish laws are being violated."

The opinion pointed out, however, that the authority granted wardens "should not be used as a means of harassing and annoying landowners, not abused to the extent that the fish wardens' activities become a nuisance."

Washington Favored On Pacific Coast To Upset Trojan Monopoly

Oregan State And L. C. A. Are Conference Darkhorses This Year

Southern California Always Has Fine Teams, Many New Coaches On Coast

By HAROLD HEROUX
International News Service Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 18—Jimmy Phelan's Washington Huskies, who came very close to upsetting the powerful, championship Southern California Trojans last season, are the pre-season favorites to win the 1940 Pacific Coast conference title.

But the experts who have picked the Huskies are keeping their fingers crossed. Phelan has had promising, veteran squads before. And each time previously that his eleven has been made the favorite, it has faltered by the wayside.

Depends On Minnesota

The conservative experts have decided to wait until Washington meets Minnesota at Minneapolis on Sept. 28 before they decide whether the Huskies are really the team-to-beat.

If Minnesota dumps Washington, Southern California will again be the coast's No. 1 team. Howard Jones again has a strong club, and it agreed that any team that knocks over the Trojans will have the inside track to the conference championship.

Oregon State and U. C. L. A. are the conference dark horses. And behind them rate California, Oregon, Stanford, Washington State, Idaho and Montana.

Outside the conference, Santa Clara looms as tops. During the past four years, Buck Shaw's Broncos have won 28, lost only 4 and tied 3 games. The University of San Francisco, St. Mary's, Gonzaga and Loyola of Los Angeles rank next among the Independents.

Coaches may come and coaches may go—in fact, there are four new coaches on the coast this fall—but the colorful veterans, Amos Alonzo Stagg and Glenn S. "Pop" Warner, still carry on.

Many New Coaches

This is Stagg's 51st season in football and his college of the Pacific eleven should be among the best in the small college class. Stagg, who knocked over California last year, opens this season against Notre Dame at South Bend.

Warner remains at San Jose State in his role of advisory coach.

The new headmen are:

At Stanford—Clark Shaughnessy, formerly of Chicago, who replaced "Tny" Thornhill.

At St Mary's—Norman "Red" Strader, ex-assistant coach, who replaced Edward P. "Slip" Madigan.

At Loyla—Marty Brill, ex-Notre Dame star, who replaced Mike Pecarovich.

At San Jose State—Ben Winkleman, one-time assistant Stanford coach, who replaced Dud Degroot, who moved on to the University of Rochester. "Pop" Warner will act as Winkleman's adviser.

Potential All-Americans are not few this year. The chief candidates include Dean McAdams of Washington, Jimmy Johnston of Santa Clara, Jack Robinson of U. C. L. A., Johnny Peoples of U. S. C., and Norm Standlee of Stanford.

College officials, working on the theory that there is nothing better than football to keep one's mind off the war, predict season receipts would reach an all-time high. Advance ticket sales are 10 per cent greater than last year at this time.

Collegiate Football Enters Sports Frame This Coming Saturday

Collegiate football edges into the sports merry-go-round Saturday.

A sprinkling of bigwigs draw the curtain against a corps of nonentities, literally speaking. All told, 63 engagements are on the date book.

The big name schools opening their season this coming week-end have made sure that their records will not be marred on opening day.

The shadow boxing contests will bring head-on the following:

Mississippi University says hello to football by meeting a one Union U.

Louisiana State will waltz with a one Louisana Tech, a team the Baton Rouge outfit once beat close to 100-0 before the game was called off shortly after the start of the fourth canto, if our memory is clear.

North Carolina's Tar-Heels go to bat against the Boone Teachers.

Clemson will have batting practice at the expense of Presbyterian.

They tell us that the University of Kentucky may be in for a surprise in its lid-lifter with Baldwin-Wallace. On paper, it does'nt seem possible that the Wildcat schedule makers didn't know what they were doing in billing this one.

Iowa State will use Luther as a punching bag.

Davidson, reported to be several shades rougher than in '39, tees-off against Rollins.

Boston College faces Centre, a team that occasionally boots the dope bucket end over end.

Under the archlights, the Centenary Gentlemen, touted as a '40 sleeper, goes forth against Hardin-Simmons. Centenary has been maneuering behind closed doors. Could it be for this one?

Virginia Military Institute crisscrosses with Roanoke, an arch rival.

Virginia Tech salutes the pigskin parade by tiffing with Catawba.

William & Mary, a somewhat tuffy, goes against North Carolina State.

Marshall has slated the Morehead Teachers for their inaugural.

Our Westminster Titans strike up the band at Edinboro, facing the Edinboro professors.

The remaining clashes bring together a lot of the smaller fish who'll be satisfied to bat .500 for the season. Many of them will serve as bait for the whales which open the campaign a week hence.

By Saturday, September 28, the football season will explode wide open with practically all of the nationally famous moleskin wearers dashing the lines amid the thunderous roar of excited fans.

Sport what-nots—Wire stories insist that New Castle is in line for Beaver Falls' franchise in the Penn State League, come the 1941 season. This corner has been checking the 'tip', purely for the news value. So far, we have been tossed for a loss. The whole thing is either another one of those wild rumors or our nose for news isn't what it should be journalistically. . . .

Westminster College's 1940 grid brochure hit the desk today, loaded with news bit. The catalog includes, among other things, an interest-synopsis of the Titans' warfares on the gridiron. We note, for instance, that back in 1914, Westminster pancaked such a worthy foe as Carnegie Tech. In '08, the Titans copped the championship. Charles McMahon, then coach, today is one of New York's better known city judges . . .

John Carroll's (Cleveland) drum-beaters contribute a few flowery comments regarding Al Piccutta, the seventh warder, who is gunning for a post on that club. "The New Castle boy is an outstanding streak linemen. Weighing 180 and always in perfect shape, Al will give the rest of the guards an honest-to-goodness battle for one of the starting berths," the dopesters write in.

It's championship time at the New Castle Field Club. Bosom pals in the clubhouse or elsewhere but keen rivals on the fairways, members of the club are firing away for the diadem. Herman Green, the ex-Notre Dame slicker, is on his way to a second straight title. He has reached the finals by way of having defeated Jim McMaster and M. K. Gilliland. He'll meet the winner of the "Tucker" Nolan vs. "Stinger" McKee match. . . .

If "Freddy" Fitzsimmons doesn't get the National League most valuable player award, watch and see how close he comes. . . . They say William Terry is occupying an inside rail along with Rajah Hornsby for Cleveland's managerial post in 1941. Don't overlook a guy named Sewell. . . . "Babe" Ganzel, St. Paul pilot, has resigned. . . .

Major Larson, Navy's coach, reportedly has a genuine triple-threater in Bill Busick. . . . Tommy Maines of Syracuse, is getting a lot of rave notices. He has been ticketed as a super-star, something along the lines of the Super-Man. . . . Tommy Harmon, of Michigan, Jim Kimbrough, of Texas A. & M. and Bill DeCorrevont, Northwestern, are the Johnny on the Spot even before the grid season starts. . . .

WEST SIDERS BATTLE HILLS TONIGHT AT 5

City-County Independent Title Series Continues At South Hills

South Hills field dominates the diamond spotlight late this afternoon.

Up in the hill sector, South Hills and the West Side A. C. collide in the second of a five-game series for a coveted prize—the 1940 championship of the City-County Independent Baseball league. The game starts at 5 o'clock.

The strong Hillers trot onto the field with a decided edge, a 7-4 victory gained last Sunday. Joe Augustine, boss of the fighting South Hills nine, today stated that Mike Frengel will be his pitching selection.

"The way Frengel has been pitching and the way my boys have been shellacking the horsehide, I can't see how we can miss winning the second game," Augustine remarked.

The West Side A. C., one of the surprise clubs of the local diamond coterie, is in tip-top shape for the encounter.

Manager Len Gilbert, the broad smiling sixth ward baseball major domo, exuded lots of optimism regarding tonight's game. His comment:

"You can bet all the tea in China that the Hills nine won't grab the championship in three straight. After today's game the series will be 'even-stephen'. Stewart or Bechtol, either of them, will silence those South Hills bats."

The two teams are two of the most bitter baseball rivals in the county. Consequently, one of those tooth-and-nail battles can always be expected.

The largest gallery of the season is anticipated.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS' LAND

Alton Lyons, Western Pennsylvania amateur champion who resides at Northeast and represents the Riverside Golf club of Cambridge Springs, shot a four over par 73 on his home course to pace a field 108 amateurs in the annual Riverside invitation tournament. Tony Massey of Sewickley and Earl Amidon of Olean, deadlocked for runner-up honors with 75s.

Indications are Billy Conn and Buddy Knox will tight somewhere. They first were supposed to box at Pittsburgh. Knox lost an encounter in California and sensing fandom didn't care for the match negotiations were dropped. Reports now say the match may be staged in Chicago.

Mike Raffa vs Johnny Buff and Jimmy Bivins vs Irish Larry Kelum are two of the 10-rounders on next Monday night's fistic card at Millvale. . . . Jimmy Isaminger, veteran Philadelphia sports scribe is in a Cleveland hospital. He was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage following the Indians-Athletic game.

Three new records for the half-mile track at Delaware, O., were made by Grand Circuit horses Tuesday. Florimal took two of them in winning the Delaware Gazette $2,500, 2-year-old-trot in straight heats. Driven by Powell, the brown fily raced the two heats in cumulative time of 4:17, bettering the old mark of 4:17 3-4, held jointly by Calumet and Laramite. In the second heat, the horse went the half-mile in 2:08, three-fourths of a second better than the old mark. Hi Pat, set a new mark of 2:05 in the third heat of the Delaware county $500 handicap pace, which Hi Pat won.

Tigers Return To First Place

Athletics Defeat Indians As Tigers Get Hot And Defeat Senators

By PAT ROBINSON
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—If this off-again-on again business continues in the American League we may all wind up dizzier than the elder of the famous Dean brothers.

And you may judge what a calamity that would be from old Diz's latest crack, made only yesterday, in which he declared any one of six American League teams could win the National League pennant by 20 games.

Take the Indians, for instance. They blew a game and the lead to the Athletics yesterday, 4-3, and one of the Athletics' runs was unearned on two errors.

The defeat dropped the tribe half a game back of the Tigers who were virtually handed a game by Walt Masterson. The young Senator was wilder than a Dizzy Dean statement and the Tigers had no trouble winning, 6-3, although they made only six hits.

Both the Browns and Yanks reverted to type and with Atley Donald giving only six hits, the latter won, 9 to 0.

Reds Win Again

There may be another shift before nightfall as the Indians take on the Senators in two games while the Tigers are tangling with the Athletics in a pair and the Yanks are staging two with the torrid White Sox. The White Sox can move into third place by taking two games.

The Reds practically put their flag on ice by coming from behind to beat the Phils, 3-2 (the 37th game they've won by one run); while Max Lanier of the Cards was left-handing the Dodgers into submission, 5-0.

The Bees put on two big rallies to wallop the Pirates, 10-5 and the Cubs handed the worst Giant team in many years its ninth straight defeat, 9-8. An hilarious eighth inning splurge in which the Cubs scored six runs on Leiber's three run homer and Hartnett's pinch double with three aboard sent Bill Terry home talking to himself.

PANTHERS ARE READY

The Rosebowl Panthers six-man football team has completed tryouts and are ready for the season. The players are Mead, White, Patton, Southern Book and Logan. For games see Earl Hammond. The team averages 130 pounds.

FROM ME TO YOU

By MESEKALL

It's time for those enrolled in a college to return to their task of learning and earning a degree. To hundreds and hundreds of young men and women, college will be a new experience . . . the first month their heads will be in a daze, the fraternity rushing season in many places takes place during this period . . . dinners are given in honor of the freshmen . . . they are taken to movies and dances . . . each fraternity tries to make their house the most attractive . . . and then comes the time for "bids" . . . after a boy or girl has made his choice of a fraternity, he must prove himself worthy of membership by keeping grades up to a set standard . . . Yes, college is a great place, it gives a boy or girl something more than plain book learning . . . so to all those who are attending the higher institutions of learning, we say . . . cheerio and hope you enjoy the year.

After making a tour of the city and surrounding territory we have come to the conclusion that the business of eating has hit a new high. There are several new eating places in town and in the territory surrounding the town . . . some specialize in summer foods and some specialize in heavier meals . . . some are considered by the eating public as first class shops while others try to slip by as easily as possible . . . but we have noticed that the shop that gives the best service does the best business . . . it's funny how the human race works . . . they are, today, always in a hurry . . . fast motor cars have made us that way . . . our forefathers drove a horse and buggy . . . but the richest man in those days didn't see as much as the ordinary man does today . . . but they did enjoy one thing that we hope doesn't ever change . . . and that one thing is liberty, may every good American citizen always have the opportunity to enjoy liberty as we have it here in the United States of America.

Some people save their vacation until this time of year . . . after talking to one of these vacationeers we feel all puffed up . . . he said that Pennsylvania had the best Highway Motor Patrol of any state that he has traveled . . . and his trip took in fourteen other states and the chap wasn't a native of Pennsylvania . . . That, to our way of thinking, is a great boost for the state . . . and we pause to salute the Pennsylvania Highway Motor Patrol and the fine men that go to make up the organization.

Market Rise Halted Today

Light Profit-Taking Appears And First Hour's Rise Is Quickly Halted

By LESLIE GOULD
(International News Service Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The stock market's rise was stalled today, as early attempts to make it four straight on the upside were met by light profit-taking in many sections of the list.

Plus signs predominated through the first half-hour, but by midday the majority of pivotal issues slipped back for net losses on the day. The undertone, however, continued steady.

Steel movements were typical. Bethlehem and U. S. Steel both converted early fractional gains into equal losses, while Youngstown Sheet & Tube slipped almost a point. General Motors and Chrysler gave a similar performance.

Allied Chemical and DuPont each were down a point at one time, but Air Reduction and Union Carbide added fractions to last night's closings.

Republic Steel convertible preferred gave up almost 2 points of yesterday's spurt of 8, following the clearing of all arrears on the issue. The prior "A," though, added 2 points to Tuesday's advance of 4 to reach a new high for the year.

Fractional declines were incurred by most coppers, mail orders, rails and rubbers. Aviation shares, Eastman Kodak, Westinghouse Electric, Pullman and Continental Can held on to modest gains.

Says Roosevelt Boasted Of Role In Munich Pact

(International News Service)

TOPEKA, Kans., Sept. 18.—President Roosevelt once "proudly boasted" of the role he played in international developments leading to the Munich settlement, Alfred M. Landon maintained today.

The Republican presidential nominee of 1936, replying to statements by Secretary of State Cordell Hull relative to Mr. Roosevelt's connection with the Munich conference, declared:

"The contention of Mr. Wallace (Henry Wallace, Democratic vice presidential nominee) about Republicans being 'appeasers' brings back to mind that Mr. Roosevelt and his official family, immediately following Munich, proudly boasted of the part Mr. Roosevelt had played in bringing about the settlement for appeasement.

"Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, on October 3, 1938, afraid lest the Roosevelt administration should not get the full measure of credit for the part played by the president at Munich, made an address to the country in which he gave, in great detail, each step taken by the president, and undertook to show that it was really Mr. Roosevelt who inspired the Munich settlement. . . .

"According to Secretary Welles' speech, the president did address communications to Hitler and Mussolini personally during the Munich negotiations and Mr. Welles was so proud of it that he read the text of the message to them.

"When Secretary of State Hull speaks about ignorance in foreign affairs he might address his remarks to persons a little closer to home, who seem to have a habit of messing up his policies as secretary of state. Instead of rebuking others, Mr. Hull might rebuke some members of his own administration, including his chief, who talked of these momentous questions in an off-hand, casual, and confusing way."

SECOND WARD WILLKIE CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Two Hundred Voters Attend Meeting At Cathedral On Tuesday Evening

With over 200 voters present, the Second Ward Willkie club was organized in the east lodge room of the Cathedral Tuesday night. Men and women of various political faiths were present, all of them interested in the candidacy of Wendell L. Willkie for President.

Dr. Paul H. Wilson, chairman of the club, opened the meeting and explained its purpose. He then called on District Attorney John G. Lamoree, who was the speaker of the evening. Mr. Lamoree pointed out a number of reasons for Willkie being supported and urged those present to do what they could to advance his candidacy.

Attorney Marshall Matheny spoke on "Registration" and said that the need presently was to get everybody registered who was not on the books. His appeal brought a response from the crowd, for at the close of the program precinct groups formed and the precincts divided into blocks. These blocks will be covered with an eye to getting every available voter registered.

On Thursday night the Downtown Second Ward Willkie club will meet, in the office of Alderman Wallace G. Ewing. On Monday night the Fourth Ward club will meet in McElroy's garage on East Washington street, and on Tuesday night the East Side club will meet in the courthouse.

COMPULSORY ATHLETICS

(International News Service)

BUTTE, Mont. — A surprising number of American young men are physically incapable of toting a rifle, according to the assistant to the president of the Amateur Athletic Union, J. Lyman Bingham. The A. A. U. official believes that an inadequate athletic program has resulted in a situation that is detrimental to national defense. "A program of compulsory athletics, started some time ago, would have done much to build these young men and prepare them for an emergency," he said during a recent visit here.

Rev. H. K. Miller Again Elected

Remains As Moderator Of Shenango Presbytery—Session On Tuesday

VETERAN MISSIONARY HEARD AT SESSIONS

Rev. William C. Johnson, D. D., who has been a missionary in the Cameroun, Africa, for almost 45 years, addressed Shenango Presbytery when the members assembled in Bessemer Presbyterian church for their meeting on Tuesday.

The group gathered at 10 a. m., was served luncheon at noon by ladies of the church, after which there was an afternoon session.

Rev. Homer K. Miller, pastor of the Volant and Rich Hill churches, was re-elected moderator for another one-half year, at this time, and Rev. T. C. Henderson was re-elected permanent clerk for one year. The Presbytery was re-organized, during the business session, the permanent committees being chosen for three year terms.

Committees Named

Some of the committee appointments were: Rev. Thomas G. Berger, Slippery Rock, chairman of united promotion; Dr. J. J. McIlvaine, New Castle, First Presbyterian, chairman of the committee on national missions; Rev. W. J. Holmes, New Castle, Calvary Presbyterian, chairman of committee on foreign missions; Dr. R. M. Patterson, New Castle, Central Presbyterian, chairman of committee on stewardship; Rev. W. F. Byers, New Wilmington, chairman of Christian Education; Rev. Arthur M. Stevenson, Ellwood City, chairman of pension committee; Dr. S. A. Kirkbride, New Wilmington, chairman of committee on bills and overtures.

Rev. Luther McDonald of Pulaski church resigned as pastor of that church and will become pastor of Windy Gap church near Washington, Pa.; Rev. George O. Brown resigned as stated supply of the Hopewell church, New Bedford, and will go to Ohio; Rev. W. J. Engle was appointed for another year as stated supply of the Enon Valley church; Rev. W. J. Holmes will continue at New Castle's Calvary church, and Dr. Charles Bell will continue at Harlansburg.

Tells Of Work In Africa

In Rev. Johnson's address, delivered during the afternoon session, he told of his work in Africa and stated that during the 45-year period, they have built up a membership of 42,000 Presbyterians in Africa and that they have an average attendance each Sunday at the various churches of their region of 127,000. He gave great encouragement and hopefulness of the progress made in civilization and educational interests. He said that industrial arts form a large part of their educational work, such as the making of cloth, tailoring and building homes. Dr. Johnson first went to that continent in 1895.

The Presbytery also heard Rev. W. F. Byers of New Wilmington report on Christian education. He urged the celebration of World-Wide Communion Sabbath, October 6. On that date, Presbytery will cooperate with all of the Evangelical churches over the whole world in this celebration.

Campaign To Close

It was announced that the Sesqui-Centennial fund campaign will close on October 20. The Presbyterian church in the United States of America has been undertaking to raise over ten million dollars in the last three years, eight million of which has already been raised. The fund will be used to place over fifty Presbyterian colleges in the United States on a sound financial foundation. The sentiment has been expressed in this campaign by such authorities as Herbert Hoover and Wendell Willkie that the maintenance of our democratic institution and, also, the upholding of standards in educational institutions of our country, rest upon the church and Christian colleges of which there are 600 in the United States, of various denominations.

Greetings were sent to Mt. Hermon Presbyterian church on their recent celebration of their 100th anniversary.

Shenango Presbytery will meet again on the third Tuesday of January, 1941, in the Central Presbyterian church of New Castle.

The problem of both candidates is to get on the front page without getting behind the eight ball.

Autumn Foliage Lures Motorists To Pennsylvania

Fall Foliage Will Soon Be At Its Best In State; Auto Invasion Expected

HARRISBURG, Sept. 18.—Judging from inquiries received by the Department of Highways Pennsylvania will be a popular place for tourists during the season when the fall foliage is at its height in the next few weeks.

In the first ten days of this month inquiries relative to touring in the Keystone state were received by the Publicity Bureau for motorists in twenty states and the District of Columbia.

Pennsylvania, with the largest mileage of improved highways in any state and with its mountains and valleys, is a veritable fairy land during the fall season when the trees take on their red, brown and yellow tints. Miles of unsurpassed scenery greet the motorist in any section of the Commonwealth all year round and especially in autumn.

During the next few weeks of the construction operations that have necessitated detours or one-way traffic, are scheduled for completion. Unless adverse weather conditions delay the contractors, by mid-October several score of detours and traffic obstructions will be removed. This will permit motorists to use many new sections of road on their tours to view the autumn foliage.

Resisting Arrest Charge Is Cause Of Heavy Fine

Mayor Charles B. Mayne in police court today fined Max Wacikowski, 1502 Hanna street, $32.00, following a hearing on charges of drunkenness, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

It was alleged he struck and kicked Patrolman Fleeger last night when Fleeger placed Wacikowski under arrest when he reportedly saw Wacikowski kicking at a Hawaiian garden window.

When Wacikowski resisted, a telephone call sent Lieutenant Steiner, Detective Young and Officers Flinner, Suber and Harper hurrying to the scene.

Wacikowski allegedly refused at first to permit a physician to attend to a wound incurred during his struggle with Fleeger.

Pending payment of the fine Wacikowski was committed to the Lawrence County jail. The $32 represents a fine of $25 plus the cost of damaged clothing and physician fees.

Little Effect On Food Supply By Raids On London

(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—German air raids have had only the "smallest" effect upon Britain's food supplies, Lord Woolton, minister for food, announced today.

"The extent of damage at most has been one day's consumption of one particular commodity," he said.

"It amounts to no more than could be made up if the population said: 'We'll put this right by going without one meal'."

Lord Woolton appealed to municipalities to establish communal kitchens for the homeless.

Grown To Old To Dream," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "I Want A Girl," "Little Old Lady," and "God Bless America."

C. W. Herman Hess, chairman, handled the role of master of ceremonies. Those attending for the first time were asked to stand and those who never missed a reunion were also asked to rise with the latter, in recognition of their faithfulness, receiving merit cards. The president of the Old Timer's organization, Fred Sankey was introduced.

Honored guests attending were asked to take a bow: Judge Thomas Dickey, Sheriff M. Ingham, Mayor Charles B. Mayne and county commissioner, George H. Bolinger. Former past presidents were also recognized: Mont Magill, C. H. Herman Hess, Judge Thomas W. Dickey, Herb D. McGoun, A. Earl Douglass, Wes. Rice and Charles H. Andrews. Paul Butz made the announcement in regards to Old Timer's Day, and asked all those having old curios to get in contact with him immediately, in order to make arrangements to use them in decorating the windows.

Mrs. Keagy, Soloist

An added feature of the occasion was the delightful singing of Mrs. Gula Bauder Keagy, who favored the assembly with the following selections, "Long Long Ago," "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair," "Coming Through the Rye," "May Day Carol," by Deems Taylor and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny." Dr. Dafoe Explains Quints Tonsil Loss

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Reasons for the removal of the tonsils of all the Dionne quintuplets were reported today by the quints' medical guardian, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, writing in the journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Dafoe's article was in reply to the query of a New York physician as to why "such perfectly reared children should all at the same time have tonsils so diseased that they had to be removed."

"There appears to be an implied suggestion in the inquiry," Dr. Dafoe wrote, "to the effect that the removal of the quintuplets' tonsils was an example of unjustified 'wholesale' tonsillectomy."

Operations Needed

Asserting he personally is opposed to the removal of tonsils when it is not necessary, Dr. Dafoe declared the operations were needed in the quints' case.

"The children had been subject to recurring attacks of tonsilitis of growing severity over the course of between two and three years," he wrote, adding that Dr. Allan Brown of Toronto, one of Canada's foremost specialists in treating children's diseases, had found the tonsils of all the quints were "chronically inflamed".

Eight months after the tonsillectomies, Dr. Brown again examined the quints, reported he found "remarkable improvement since the removal of their sources of infection," and said "the operations will act as an insurance policy for their future health".

No Explanation

Dr. Dafoe said he could not explain why diseased tonsils appeared in the quints, though he claimed it was not surprising the condition affected all five in view of their close association and identical environment. However, he added:

"It is well known that diseased tonsils occur in children of the best homes as well as those of the worst. We believe the care that has been given to these children is the best possible care we could have given them. These children are subject to outside sources of infection a great deal more than the public realizes, despite our attempts to protect them."

Modify Tank Plans For Modern Warfare

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9. — The United States government is modifying the designs of its most modern war tanks at the suggestion of British veterans of the campaign in which Nazi Germany defeated France, it became known Thursday.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau revealed today that experts on the British war purchasing commission in the United States who formerly commanded tank battalions in the fierce fighting have given American tank designers suggestions aimed at making tanks more effective both in offense and defense. He added that as a result, designs of tanks for the defense program now in production have been changed to incorporate ideas worked out as a result of experience under fire by the English tank commanders.

Morgenthau would not reveal the nature of these changes. He made his disclosure as a carefully planned burst of speed thrust the administration defense program into the early production stage on all fronts.

Secretary of War Stimson placed six government gun and ammunition plants on a 24-hour six-day week basis, a program calculated to provide about 8,000 new jobs for skilled mechanics and more than 16,000 for less skilled workers.

The navy reported naval air and sea base improvements in the Pacific will be completed months ahead of schedule.

Edward Tamm, assistant Federal Bureau of Investigation director, and the war department intelligence division, have developed a coordinated plan for the quick detection of subversive activities, saboteurs and "fifth columns."

Increased Need

The war department said the need for war supplies and increased employment, prompted its action in putting the arsenals on a 24-hour basis. Workers will be paid time and a half for work over 40 hours a week. The three shift order, virtually tripling the workers in the plants, applied to the arsenals in Rock Island, Ill.; Watertown, Mass.; Philadelphia; Springfield, Mass.; Dover, N. J.; and Watervliet, N. Y., the three shifts will begin work Aug. 10.

Arthur B. Purvis, head of the British purchasing commission, said British plan to expand their American munition purchases by "hundreds of millions of dollars." He said the additional purchases would be in fields not so far entered by the commission, and would include tanks and field artillery.

Engineer Injured As Pennsy Freight Of 20 Cars Derails

(International News Service)

DU BOIS, Pa., Aug. 9.—Twenty cars and one locomotive of a 64-car freight train were derailed and badly damaged Thursday on the Renovo division of the Pennsylvania railroad at Winterburn.

The engineer, C. T. Hackett of DuBois, suffered arm and back injuries but others of the crew escaped when the heavy engine and tender rolled over an embankment.

Four of 53 loaded cars in the train followed the engine down the embankment.

The train was travelling east toward Driftwood when the derailment apparently caused by an obstruction on the track, occurred.

Hackett, it was reported by railroad officials at Pittsburgh, was buried in coal from the tender, and was taken to DuBois hospital.

Sixteen of the freight cars, some loaded with merchandise, were badly smashed.

Communication from the scene of the wreck was cut off when the careening train pulled down telephone lines, it was reported.

S. A. McCool of New Kensington, fireman on the lomocotive, escaped injury.

ITALIAN COLUMNS REPORTED STOPPED

(International News Service)

CAIRO, Aug. 9.—Two Italian columns which Wednesday advanced from Ethiopia into British Somaliland were halted today at Hargeisa and Odweina, according to an official British announcement.

"Royal air force reconnaissance patrols report little movement of the Fascist forces in the vicinity of either place," the communique said.

upon which it seeks continuation in office ignored the whole subject of Federal finance as though it did not exist.

THAT under existing conditions the Government should not immediately suspend all public work not actually essential to the general welfare, and curtail all governmental activities and expenditures so as to permit the handling of this immense armament program without undermining the national credit, just does not make sense. But no such course is in contemplation. There is no plan to curtail or cut down—not even in the WPA, where the greatest savings could be made and although the defense program is certain greatly to reduce unemployment. The last thing this Administration will do—at least before election—is cut down. Rather than do that it seems willing to risk irretrievable economic ruin. This is not a pleasant picture to look at but the more people can be made to view it now, the less painful it is likely to be in the end.

out. And the G. O. P. is deferring its agitation until Labor Day.

Plenty of Interviews

Of course, Candidate Willkie is giving out plenty of interviews. Also wisecracks.

Nevertheless, the Republicans haven't launched a genuine offensive, and they say they won't do so until nearly the last minute. They've had considerable tip-top material offered to them and, at first, they accepted some of it, but, on second thought, they've choked it off until Labor Day.

I suppose they actually haven't the cash to work any faster.

But, if they want to win, it would pay them to dig it up.

Democratic headquarters is enjoying the situation first rate.

DAILY DOZEN

(From the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania)

"Here comes lighting and thunder, let's get under a tree!"

What is wrong with that sentence?

Trees attract lightning and are often struck by it.

Persons standing under trees are sometimes killed.

Lightning does not kill a great many people.

Three persons in every million are killed by lightning.

City buildings act as conductors and minimize the danger.

Most of those struck by lightning are exposed in field or road.

Any upright object projecting from the ground may be a conductor.

The tallest nearby object may become the natural target.

During a storm do not stand on a hill or under a tree.

Many are afraid of lightning—few are killed by it.

Non-Schooling Is Regretted Too Late

Survey Shows Most Of Those Who Quit School Want To Return Later

(International News Service)

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. Aug. 10.—Boys who quit school before they should, almost invariably regret it and would like to return after it is too late, according to a ten-year study just completed by Dr. C. S. Anderson, professor of agricultural education at the Pennsylvania State college.

Dr. Anderson found that only one-third of a group of young farmers who had left school before graduation had expressed a desire to be farmers.

"Many of these who had no desire to be farmers might have learned about other ways to make a living if they had stayed in school longer," he stated. "Schools should have followed up these boys to find out why they quit and to encourage them to return."

Now the proof of intelligence is the ability to think and feel today as the crowd will think and feel six months later.

Pennsylvanians Charter Trains To Hear Willkie

Trains To Be Placed On Siding At Elwood, Indiana, And Used As Hotels

HARRISBURG, Aug. 10—Upward of 300 Pennsylvanians will journey by special trains to Elwood, Ind., next week to participate in the Willkie acceptance speech program, according to Dr. James K. Loewen of this city, chairman of the Committ of Arrangements.

The delegation will be headed by U. S. Senator James J. Davis, and State Chairman James F. Torrance. Members of the governor's cabinet and other party leaders will be on the air-conditioned solid Pullman trains which will leave Philadelphia, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh Friday evening, August 16, arriving in Elwood Saturday morning.

The trains will be placed on a siding in Elwood just a few short blocks from the Elwood school house where the first part of the program will be held. All meals will be served aboard the trains and are included in the round trip fare.

Asked if any Democrats had made reservations, Doctor Loewen said: "Several Willkie-for President Democrats have already secured tickets, and there will be quite a few on board when the train pulls out."

Other members of the committee of arrangements are David W. Harris and Fred T. Garman, Philadelphia; G. Graybill Diehm, Lancaster; Alvin Bush, Williamsport; William Habbyshaw, Harrisburg; and Fred T. Cavendish, Pittsburgh. Republican county chairmen of the several counties have tickets and are arranging for county delegations to board the trains at one of the stops across the state.

Leaving Philadelphia at 5:07 EST Friday, August 16, stops will be made at Paoli, Coatesville, Lancaster, Harrisburg, Lewistown, Huntingdon, Altoona, Johnstown, Greensburg and Pittsburgh. Returning, the train will leave Elwood at 8:10 p. m. Saturday, August 17, arriving in Philadelphia in mid-afternoon.

The Church's one foundation

She is His new creation

From heav'n He came and sought her
To be His holy bride;
With His own blood He bought her,
And for her life He died.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This favorite hymn of dedication reiterates the central truths of the Christian Faith found in the Apostles' Creed. It is a fitting choice when a cornerstone is to be laid, for it suggests the words of Jesus: "The stone which the builders rejected, the same is to become the head of the corner."

We have provided some souvenir booklets which contain a collection of these Little Stories of Great Hymns. As long as they last we will be glad to present them to our friends without charge or obligation. Call our office (Phone 4221-J) or write your request for one of these interesting books.

A NATION OF FIFTY MILLION VOTERS

ACCORDING to the political statisticians, the popular vote for President this year should pass the fifty million mark for the first time. While the regular increase in the number of qualified voters over a four-year period usually means the casting of more ballots, there have been exceptions.

In 1904 there were nearly half a million fewer votes than in 1900. The 1896 vote was also larger than that of 1904, when Theodore Roosevelt ran against Judge Parker and the electorate expected the resulting walkover for the Republican candidate.

Many can remember when only about one qualified voter in three took the trouble to go to the polls. The proportion of those appreciating the franchise has since been steadily rising. Perhaps the fate of dictatorship-ruled peoples has caused more of our citizens to realize what it means to live in a true democracy where the wishes of the majority can be made effective at the ballot box.

GREENLAND TO TRADE HERE

Little Greenland and her 20,000 inhabitants do not form a great world market which would attract a hulla-baloo as they come to America to trade, but in view of Greenland's location between Europe and Canada, the fact the former Danish dependency is coming into our orbit is important.

Since the Nazis took over Denmark, Greenland has been ruled by Eske Brun, governor of North Greenland, and Askel Svane, governor of South Greenland, Governor Brun has been in New York with a Greenland Trade Commission and he announces that he has virtually succeeded in replacing the markets lost in Europe with agreements made in Canada and the United States.

The amount of this trade will not be large. Chief export of the island is cryolite, a mineral used in manufacture of aluminum and glass. It constitutes three quarters of the export products of Greenland, and a year's production is worth about a million and a half dollars. Imports are smaller than that figure.

The attraction of this trade to the Western Heemisphere means, however, that sympathy of Greenland will turn to America increasingly as time goes on. Any Nazi move toward Canada via Greenland would reasonably be reported by the island to Ottawa and any surprise element would be removed.

Incidentally, Brun doesn't think Greenland would be on the path of aerial invaders. He said establishment of air bases there would be almost impossible because of the terrain. That's comforting news.

BRITAIN'S AIR TEST

It is plain as Nazi planes increasingly darken the skies over England that the test for the British Isles is one of endurance. The blitzkrieg thrust across the Channel by boat has not eventuated and may not soon. The apparent objective is to strike with a gradually growing number of planes to shake up Britain's factories, sink its ships, make its ports untenable, occupy the defending air force 100 per cent and decimate it.

There can be in the German plan a scheme to seize Ireland and possibly Iceland with parachute troops to give the Nazis landing fields completely surrounding England.

Just as Britain's fleet bore the brunt of German attack in the first stages of the war, so now the Royal Air Force has to prove its mettle and its staying powers against a foe that outnumbers it.

This style of attack will lack a lot of offering the excitement to the German people that the blitzkrieg against France did. It may not bolster their hope for an early end of the war and a return to normal living. And if the Hitler air war does not make important contributions toward a conquest of England, the German dictator will be up against the proposition of doing something sensational speedily or of meeting the menace of declining favor at home.

OUT OF SHANGHAI

Great Britain's withdrawal of troops from Shanghai not only leaves the United States holding the bag but definitely marks the confusion of the British Empire before Japan's impudence in China. It is reported that the 1,500 soldiers taken from Shanghai will be stationed at Hong Kong, the British town which is now Britain's last stand in China.

It was nearly forty years ago that the Boxers started their campaign of China for the Chinese. All the powers then pushed into China to break up the Boxers and, having done so, stationed troops at pivotal points to maintain order. One by one the powers later withdrew from the policing job until only four bodies of foreign troops could be found at Shanghai—the British, the American, the French and the Japanese.

Now the French troops are not in a position to enforce anything; the British have quit; and Japanese and American soldiers are holding job the job alone. It appears almost inevitable that they should clash

Whether such a clash may be the spark to start a Japanese-American war or not, this latest move signifies that Britain is beating a retreat in China and, for the Occident, America is holding the fort in the Orient by itself.

German is to be the universal language in conquered France, Hitler has ordered. Already a lot of Frenchmen have learned to say "ja."

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

REMEMBERING LESSONS ONCE LEARNED

Sometimes we suppose we have forgot everything we ever learned at school. But we haven't. Though some of it cannot be recalled at the moment, some can; after a little practice, all may be. We don't forget nearly so much as we think we do.

Perhaps we never entirely forget anything we once memorized. Oh, yes, at the moment we try to recall it we may fail, but at some later, more favorable time, it may flash into the mind. Often this happens at the time we need it least. Nevertheless, the very fact that it came back at all is proof that it was not entirely forgotten.

How Much We Remembered

Some years ago Mrs. Myers and I published in the American Journal of Psychology a research, "Reconstructive Recall." Each of us wrote down at regular intervals, over a period of several months, all that could be recalled of selections memorized years before but partially or almost entirely forgot in the meanwhile.

During the months over which we tried to dig out of our memories what seemed to have been forgotten, we did not see the original selections nor have any help. All we reconstructed was from our own heads. Through this long, persistent effort at recall we were able to reconstruct from about twenty to eighty per cent of what at first appeared to have been wholly forgotten. We have no doubt that if we had had the persistence to continue at this task over several more months or years, practically all of the selections would have been recalled.

Practice Frequently

Of course, for our recalls to be most useful we must be able to make them when we want them. In order to do this we need to keep our memories alive by frequent practice and recalls.

The permanence of skills is more apparent. Only a few weeks ago I discovered that some of my skills at handling hay, learned years ago, still persisted.

The next-farm neighbor to where the Myers family spend most of their summers was almost killed by the front feet of a vicious horse, so my youngest son and I volunteered to make hay for him. I was proud of the skill with which I could pitch hay.

Applied to such skills in arithmetic, spelling and typing, the quality of skill one has at any age depends not so much on the quantity of practice as the quality of it, the degree of accuracy in the early steps of getting this skill. Such school skills as the child will want to use all his life are most useful when learned with precision. This is why I so often urge that the child learn the simple addition and subtraction facts by heart, and without error, early; and that those who still have trouble with these basic items in arithmetic be encouraged to master them at once. The task is easy, if intelligently attacked.

In case you wish to have a copy of the 100 addition facts and the 100 subtraction facts for your child to memorize this summer, write me, at 235 East 45th Street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it. Whether your child is in the ninth, fifth or second grade, he may still need to learn these foundation items in arithmetic, if he ever is to succeed in this subject. A good way for the child to learn them is to attack only four or five of them a day, copying these from the sheet and learning them as mechanically as if he were learning to spell.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Suppose a child, at the age of eight, twelve, or fifteen threw a book across the floor in rage. What should you do?

A. Bite your tongue or do anything else to keep silent and appear serene. Under no condition should you command the child to pick up the book—if you wish to get best results. Several hours later when there seems to be no wall btween you and the child you might say to him in a gentle way, that he probably would like to manage himself better next time he gets awfully mad, seeing that he wants to have many friends. Then if you have been so persuasive as to cause him to ask how he might effect improvement, you have scored a great victory; so has he.

Q. You see crayon marks on the wall and suppose your two-year-old tot made them. Would you ask the child if he did it?

A. I hope I would not so tempt him to lie. I should spend considerable time and patience at helping him enjoy only the correct use of the crayons. I should not leave the child alone with the crayons until he had learned to use them properly.

FAILURE

When I grow peevish over care
And into fits of temper fly
O'er crosses which I ought to bear
Disguested with myself am I.

When irritation I display
And look with anger's flashing eyes
On hurts I ought to laugh away,
Myself I thoroughly despise.

Though others pass the tantrum by
'Tis something which I can't forget
It bothers me to think that I
Can be so easily upset.

When to some real or fancied wrong
Up to my best I've failed to live;
For being weak instead of strong
Myself I never quite forgive.

Yes, Isabel, I will gladly add to yours my own protest against this too common form of brutality. Within the past week while passing through a pleasure park where many picnickers were gathered I heard a woman, whose face was stamped with cruelty, threaten a child about three in these words: "I'll crack you in the mouth if you don't stop that."

Any psychologist will testify to the extend to which children are developed into nervous wrecks by rough treatment and rough language, which their childish minds know to be undeserved.

A serious form of neuraesthenia manifested throughout life in chronic apprehension results from threats to innocent children inflicted by parents, teachers or nurses during moments of impatience or anger. It is but another phase of the brutality shown by those who unjustly beat their horses or dogs just because they themselves are in an abnormal condition of mind.

Reader's Questions Answered

Question: I should like to give a shower for a very dear friend. What are duties?—Peggie.

Answer: You should plan the shower entirely....decide upon the time, place and the type of shower. You should suggest the kind of gifts for the guest's to present—linen, kitchen, miscellaneous, etc.

If the shower is held in your own home in the afternoon, you might serve tea, sandwiches and cake. If it is held in the evening (men may then be invited) you may serve a midnight supper. Aside from the presentation of gifts, it may be conducted like any other party.

If your home is not large enough for entertaining numerous guests, hire a private room in a tearoom or hotel and have a catered meal served. Make all of your arrangements with the manager several weeks in advance of the event.

ONLY FRIENDSHIP'S TRULY GREAT!

Comes a time when the humblest man
Is a voice in heaven's plan;
Comes an hour when poets pen
Thoughts that change the souls of men;
Comes a light that all shall see,
For 'tis the truth that sets men free.
Now have come that time and light
So attend these words I write—
Though men rave of righteous hate
Only Friendship's truly great!

What were truth without that soul
Who is one great purpose whole,
Who shall dare to be or nought,
Of one beauteous burning thought
With such thought I am possest,
It is flame within my breast
So attend me while I shout
This great truth man dies without—
Though men rave of righteous hate
Only friendship's truly great!

If your bosom holds a heart
If 'mong men you'd play your part
If you are not lost to song
If you still would right one wrong
If God has some need of you
If you also need Him too,
If you are not wholly dead,
Or on emptly vapors fed
If you have not sunk so low
That you care not where you go
If you are of flesh and blood
And your veins do not run mud—
Hear me, hear me, hear me through
Whatsoever else you do—
Though men rave of righteous hate
Only Friendships truly great.

Burke And Holt Noisy Lame Ducks
Act More Like Fighting Game Cocks
Both Ardent Anti-New Dealers Now

By CHARLES P. STEWART
(Central Press Columnist)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Edward R. Burke of Nebraska and Rush D. Holt of West Virginia are senatorial "lame ducks." That is to say, they were defeated in their respective states for Democratic renominations to the upper congressional chamber. Just now they're serving out the fag ends of their expiring terms, until the new year comes in.

Thus, technically they're lame ducks, but they certainly behave more like thoroughly able-bodied roosters.

Senator Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota also was beaten for a Republican renomination. He's quite subdued, however, as a lame duck is supposed to be. Far be it from Senators Burke and Holt, though, to manifest the least sign of recognition of the fact that their senatorial days are numbered.

Senator Burke was one of the authors of the conscription bill originally introduced in congress. It's known as the Burke-Wadsworth bill, Representative James W. Wadsworth having been the Nebraskan's partner in drafting it. It's a trifle odd that Burke, a Democrat, and Wadsworth, a Republican, should have teamed up on the conscription proposition, but old-fashioned party lines don't mean much in Washington at present.

At any rate, Burke, of course, is a 100 per cent conscriptionist. But Holt isn't. He's 100 per cent the other way.

That's another funny thing. Burke was licked for renomination presumably at least in part because he was a conscriptionist. Holt was licked at least partly because he wasn't one.

Both Anti-New Dealers

Maybe the circumstance that they're both Democratic anti-New Dealers also had something to do with their lickings. The New Deal's political campaign managers would like to think so. They were highly gratified by the pair's beatings in the Nebraska and West Virginia primaries.

They were pleased because Burke and Holt, alike, have vigorously fought President Roosevelt's policies in the senate.

Burke doubtless has been a worse headache to the White House than Holt, for the reason that the former generally rates as a heavier weight than the latter. The West Virginian is as vitriolic as anybody ever to arrive on Capitol Hill, but he's been somewhat discounted as mainly "sound and fury," signifying very little.

Holt will be remembered as having been elected at so early an age that he barely skimmed into the senate, after a little delay, in conformity with constitutional requirements. Consequently, it's as a "baby statesman" that he's classified, which always is a handicap. Burke, on the opposite hand, always has been taken seriously.

The Nebraskan has plenty of ability. I wouldn't say that Holt hasn't also, but it hasn't had time to mature as much as Burke's has.

Senator Norris' Influence

It unquestionably was hard luck for Burke, in his unsuccessful fight for renomination, that George W. Norris was his fellow senator from the Cornhusker commonwealth.

George Norris is approximately Nebraska's patron saint and he's an ardent New Dealer, though he wears an Independent, not a Democratic label. The chances are that lots of Nebraskans cast their primary ballots against Burke principally because he differed from "Uncle George" on New Deal issues.

Burke, as previously remarked, is an exceedingly war-like lame duck. Still, he's dignified.

Holt emits some downright violent language. Furthermore, he provokes various other senators to really vituperative cracks at himself. The recent slang slinging debate between himself and Senator Sherman Minton another Democrat) of Indiana was a case in point. Holt referred to the conscriptionists as "dollar patriots." Minton said that Holt belonged to a "slacker family." Holt replied that Minton was a "malicious liar."

This kind of conversation, on the senate floor, verges on the unparliamentary. And there was more of it.

The "lame ducks" are singing their "swan song," to be sure, but it's martial music.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

ONLY CONTEMPT

Hitler told the British people he would destroy them unless they made peace at once on his terms. He offered neither reasons nor terms—only the threat of frightfulness undreamed of. He demanded a personal reply from Prime Minister Churchill, declaring he would spare England from her doom only long enough to receive the reply of the head of England's government.

When Winston Churchill appeared before the House of Commons two days later, all Germany hung upon his words; all Nazidom and Hitler. Churchill spoke briefly and calmly. But he said no word in direct reply to Hitler. He ignored him as though he were a puppy yapping at the surf of English shores. Of such a statesman, the American philosopher Emerson wrote: "A determined man by his very attitude and the tone of his voice puts a stop to defeat and begins to conquer."

It can hardly be doubted that Churchill's silence was far more thunderous in its impact on both British and German nerves, than was the menacing outburst of Hitler. The studied contempt of the statesman for self-styled master of Europe was a tonic for British hearers and it made the I-demand-an-answer post of a defeated Fuehrer seem more than a bit ridiculous in the eyes of all the world—and of all Germans who understand that rather peculiar things known as English humor.

The Human Side Of The News

(By EDWIN C. HILL)

Copyright 1940 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A lad we know had gone to progressive schools until his eleventh year. Under this modern technique, he had been taught to define things mainly in terms of experience, with a minimum of book definitions. Transferred to a public school, he was given his lesson to study and later called to account by a stern teacher, who said, "John, please rise and give us the definition of a river." The lad was puzzled and tongue-tied. Finally, he muttered, "Nuts! Everybody knows what a river is," and walked out. He was in bad trouble. They dragged him back and rubbed his nose in a geography book.

Most of us, no doubt, think we know what a river is, but perhaps we have been mistaken, judging from the new river consciousness of our country. Books about American rivers keep rollin' along, in a tide started, I believe, by Ben Burman a few years ago in his saga of the Mississippi. The latest is "The Delaware," by Harry Emerson Wildes, a highly entertaining and informing tale of this noble stream.

We occasionally have noted in this corner the rediscovery of America during the last few years. There has been more delving into Americana, more scouting of old forgotten trails than in all the last century. The unending series of a river books is a valid exhibit.

Recently we were re-reading Kipling's long poem, "The River." He strings English history on this meandering stream, like beads in a necklace. One cannot read this poem without feeling that the actual, sensuous, physical, visual and long-experienced love of a homeland will build a stouter heart for its defense than anything put down i nthe books about political system or abstractions of fealty and patriotism. Therefore we put in a word for the river books and all the other explorations of our past. We'll fight more readily and fight harder for something seen, loved and understood than for anything out of a book.

Once upon a time, this country was so rich and so safe—or seemed to be—that it could afford to regard hot political campaigns as primarily good public entertainment. This being true, the winner in a debate was quite apt to be the man who was best at savage invective.

Our old-line politicians were good at this. There were insults and name-calling which left never a dull moment in the debate. People would drive a buckboard thirty miles over muddy roads for a set-to like this. Perhaps the issues were obscured by the intemperate language. But we could afford it. We were a big, free, rich country and we could write off waste and take up slack.

Can we do so now? Wendell L.

PRIMER OF AMERICANISM

PHILIP D. REED, recently elected chairman of the board of General Electric Company, has written a primer of Americanism which merits the attention of every citizen. It contains seven points of advice, as follows:

1. Understand, honor and preserve the Constitution of the United States.

2. Keep forever separate and distinct the legislative, executive and judicial functions of government.

3. Remember that government belongs to the people, is inherently inefficient, and that its activities should be limited to those which government alone can perform.

4. Be vigilant for freedom of speech, freedom of worship and freedom of action.

5. Cherish the system of free enterprise which made America great.

6. Respect thrift and economy, and beware of debt.

7. Above all, let us be scrupulous in keeping our word and in respecting the rights of others.

Carefully observed and upheld, these principles would go far toward preventing the infiltration of objectionable foreign ideologies. Mr. Reed must be credited with singling out seven fundamental steps in the American way of life.

WAR WEATHER VANES

In furtherance of the eager search of almost everybody for light on the true military situation as between Germany and Britain, there occasionally creep into the dispatches little bits of information which may be indicative of a Nazi lack of confidence.

One such is the Berlin announcement that Germany has developed a new and superior type of fighter plane which is designed to meet the British Spitfire. On its face this would appear to be tacit admission that the British have had the better of the Germans in at least one type of aerial warfare and that the Germans are trying to repair their defect. London has been claiming a qualitative superiority for the Royal Air Force which largely offsets the Nazis quantitatively.

A note of rising British confidence is the conversion of the Defensive machine into a mobile one capable of striking at any point. The British began on a theory of static defense—a solid, immovable stand. It is the immemorial dogma of defense, but all who have tried it against Germany have evaporated. Britain apparently believes its organization is such that it can meet Hitler on his own terms.

On the continent the Nazis are trying to shift populations at a great rate, the main thought being to get conquered manpower over into Germany for farm and industrial labor. This argues that Germany has a far more serious organizational problem than Britain.

Hitler's over-long blitzkrieg delay and his apparent reliance upon bombing and submarine war imply a change of plan from the time that France fell like a straw man and the Nazis boasted that Britain would be easy.

AID FOR REFUGEES

Had any one needed proof that the fortunes of war flash constantly new angles on problems—just as it may change the American political campaign completely between now and election day—he would see such proof in the trouble this government is having in getting food to the refugees in France.

Before France flopped, Congress gave President Roosevelt $50,000,000 to distribute among refugees in Europe. It was easy at that time to ship food from the United States to France. Today France is included in the British blockade, and if President Roosevelt can develop a way through which to get food to the refugees in France, Britain is not expected to approve the move.

Such help to France would fly in the face of the British plan to starve out Europe and thus bag Hitler. Moreover, Britain has a lively suspicion that American food sent to France would be taken by the Germans, fed to their own forces or forwarded on to Germany.

The American Red Cross also has collected $20,000,000 for the refugees. It is getting some food into France, by agreement with Britain, but is taking care not to make an agreement with the Germans which would let the business of distribution get out of Red Cross hands.

CLINGING TO SALARIES

One of the things brought out by the war with all its disruptions and disorders is the remarkable capacity the run of politicians in the diplomatic line demonstrate in haning on to their official salaries. No tighter grip on a teat was ever taken than that by the average diplomat on the public treasury.

The chaos which has overcome Europe at the hands of Hitler has scattered embassies to the winds. Most of the legation staffs have hiked for home, but nothing has appeared in print about their stipends being suspended. The pay they get abroad they continue to get at home.

Foreign Minister Zaleski, addressing the Polish parliament—lately in France, now in England—said that Poland's diplomatic representation in France would be resumed. Of course. The Polish minister will not return to France. But he will get some kind of a lien on a salary to be collected when Poland is restored as a separate country.

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

DEALING WITH PROBLEM CHILD

Suppose you were only 24 and had four children from 14 months to five and one-half years of age, do you suppose you would be half as poised and successful as the mother who wrote the following letter?

"Dear Dr. Myers:—I really feel as if I am writing to an old friend in writing you as I have been benefited by the advice in your column so often. . . .

"I am only 24 but am the mother of four children, 5½, 3½, 2½, and 14 months. In the big things like going into the street, coming out when put to bed, etc., I seem to have them under control but I am at a loss what to do about those annoying little things that drive one to distraction yet hardly seem to merit a spanking or other real punishment. The problem child seems to shift from one to the other. Right now the oldest boy is the one who seems to make the most trouble. He is continually picking up things he is not supposed to touch, sticking his fingers in food, etc., always seeming to know just how far he can go without any real punishment but I know that the continual scoldings are not helping him, and certainly not me. I have felt that perhaps these things have arisen from jealousy and I try to spend time reading to them, etc., but I have so little time and since their father works at night he does not have much chance to be with them.

"I certainly will appreciate any help you can give me. This continual uproar is beginning to make me feel I am a complete failure as a mother.

"A self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed."

My reply:

"Bless your soul, young mother, you should be proud of your success in handling these four little children. If any of us fathers had your job we would be 'nuts'. What I marvel at is that you reveal as much poise as you do. You have controlled these little children well in large matters. But as you indicate, there are hundreds of little items that try your patience.

"Let me suggest that you put a few more of these 'little things' in the group of 'big things'. For example, after you have warned the youngster once or twice about a forbidden act, speak no more; act. Assign the offender to sit in a chair where you can see him doing nothing for exactly 20 minutes by the clock. If he moves one inch from the chair without permission spank him soundly and without warning. Fine your read to them. Let other things go.

"A little dust or disorder is unimportant in comparison to such companionship with them. Let the eldest choose the story, as a rule, since he is 'so big.'

"You are right in suspecting jealousy in him. Don't make him give up his things to the younger; certainly not often. See that the younger ones respect his rights. When he does something fine praise him; also when he cooperates with you. When he seems most out of sorts pick him up, hold him on your lap and cuddle him. This will give him the reassurance he so much needs, that he is loved.

"If at all possible, hire some help so you can get more rest and recreation. You even might afford to borrow money for this purpose till these children grow old enough to care for themselves and help you. Train them then to share in the home duties.

"Please Mrs.———, never condemn yourself again. I just know you are a wonderful mother to those lovely little children and may God bless you. Be proud of your successes with them."

"I enclosed a folder describing a series of 15 pamphlets I have written on the baby and young child, being simple presentations of my university lectures to pre-school parents. Anyone else may receive this folder by writing me at 235 E. 45th St., New York City, N. Y., enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

SUCCESS

'Tis part of the code that a man must be Honest and kind and clean,
For what is the good of his skill if he
Is bitter and harsh and mean?
And what is the worth of the prize he earns
If after the night comes down
Nobody rejoices, as he returns
From the care of the busy town?

It isn't enough to be shrewdly wise
Or clever of hand or strong.
The lasting joy of a lifetime lies
In friendship and mirth and song.
Unless something of love and kindness clings
To the triumphs a man may win
The gains he makes are pitiful things
And selfish and cold as sin.

There's little pride in a brain, all-smart,
Mere cunning and strength are cold.
Man must be more than a fighting heart
And more than a killer cold.
He must grace with character all his deeds,
Be honest and clean and kind.
For the life successful also needs
The triumphs of heart and mind.

Hints On Etiquette

If you have allergies to certain foods, better notify your week-end hostess in time so that she can avoid those foods in her meal planning, or say nothing about them, and "do the best you can." It is embarrassing for a hostess to plan a delicious meal and then be told that her guest cannot eat so-and-so.

Good Taste

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

Here in this morning's mail is a jeremiad I have often received before: "I do not make friends as easily as I would like. Please advise me how to attract people."

My answer: Somewhere in your neighborhood is a newcomer who is probably lonely because in these days of telephones, radios, movies and automobiles the speed of life is so great that old-time courtesies are forgotten. When you see such a neighbor sitting alone take the initiative and get acquainted.

Approach her as though you are already friends. Do not wait to see if she will make the first advances. When next you are relaxing, take inventory of the people you know and know of. Imagine you are each of them, in turn, and visualize what acts of yours would win their friendship. Regard each of them as fully worthy of your friendly interest. Without prying into their private affairs take a genuine interest in those whose esteem you desire. Learn of their hobbies, ambitions and life work. Then talk to them about those interests of theirs, not about your own. Avoid these approaches: That you need their cooperation; that you are trying to convert them to some political or other doctrine; that you are lonely, generally misunderstood, superior to or hostile to others in the crowd or neighborhood, that you are trying to advertise your ancestry, possessions, superior learning. Appear amused at whatever may be silly, tolerant of what may be disagreeable, appreciative of all that is fine.

Readers' Questions Answered

Question: I am going to give a bridge party for a bride. How many prizes should I give for four tables, and should I give an honor prize.—Miriam.

Answer: You should give a prize to the player winning the highest score, and if you choose, one for the second highest score. The "guest prize" is simply a gift presented to the guest of honor. It is never won.

Question: In what hand should a train be held while one is dancing?—Virginia.

Answer: It must necessarily be held in the left hand, since you must, with your right hand, hold your partner's hand.

Republican Campaign Starts Slowly
Democrats Are Badly Disorganized
G. O. P. Will Conserve Its Finances

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. — The Republicans are singularly slow in getting their presidential campaign vigorously a-going.

The Democrats are slow, too, but that isn't so odd. Their national committee has been in a sad state of disorganization, with Chairman Farley just quitting. They doubtless simply have to have a certain amount of time to steam up under the management of Edward J. Flynn, Farley's successor.

Chairman Joe Martin, at the G. O. P.'s throttle, however, assuredly is throughly familiar already with all the political gadgets he has to control.

Yet Republican headquarters announces that it doesn't intend to hit things up to a maximum before Labor Day. Why not until then? Spokesmen answer, "We haven't any money at present." And they act as if they really hadn't. Anyway, they're not spending much thus far. There's considerable good publicity they could have by paying for it, but they won't be in footing the bill.

The Democrats, on their part, can afford to wait awhile, if the G. O. P.'s inactivity permits 'em to do so.

Delay a Democratic Asset

Delay would seem to be helpful to the Democrats.

While things drag along, there nevertheless is an undercurrent of questioning, "Say, who is Willkie?" For there's no denying that he wasn't a bit well known to the bulk of the country's voters until mighty shortly before his nomination at Philadelphia.

And the standardized Democratic answer to this query is, "Why, he's a big utility man."

Now, indisputably "big public utility men" generally have been unpopular in this country in recent years. If a regular above-board campaign were raging, with Willkie being referred to from the stump as a big public utility man, the charge against him would be vociferously replied to, with the explanation that he's an exception — he's been a GOOD public utility man.

But this sotto voce stuff isn't rebutted at all.

Hence, when the campaign really opens, and the Willkieites break out oratorically in his behalf, there's the risk that a lot of the electorate will have been convinced in advance that Wendell's just of the ordinary public utility stripe and a deal of preliminary mischief to his candidacy will have to be undone, and maybe it can't wholly be UN-done.

Domestic Policies

The G. O. P. likewise needs to develop a formidable attack on the New Deal's administrative methods.

As to policies, it doesn't differ widely from President Roosevelt's. It considers him too interfering in foreign affairs, but it agrees with him as to preparedness. It recognizes much good in his socio-economic plans, but it maintains that he's bungled them hopelessly in execution. It implies that he's contemplatively totalitarian.

And it needs to get started, as speedily as possible, in its warfare against his domestic policies and his expenditures—his alleged wastefulness.

Otherwise, if the war goes on an increasing rampage, domestic arguments, unless furiously agitated previously, will be completely drowned

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

THE THIRD TIME

Casca—Why, there was a crown offered him, and being offered him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus, and the people fell a-shouting.

Brutus—What was the second noise for?

Casca—Why, for that too.

Cassius—They shouted thrice. What was the last cry for?

Casca—Why, for that, too.

Brutus—Was the crown offered him thrice?

Casca—Ay, Marry was't and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than the other; and at every putting-by, my honest neighbors shouted.—Julius Caesar 1:ii.

There is only a slight difference between what happened in Chicago in the balloting for President at the National Democratic Convention and what the characters in Shakespeare's Play depicted.

The President made, if you will, a motion with the back of his hand. He said, "Far be it from me to seek a third term"—that he would prefer the quiet of Hyde Park to the turmoil in Washington; at least, he said that, but he has not hesitated to accept what was offered him, and no doubt if Julius Caesar had lived, he would have accepted the Crown. It is not pleasant to look at national events in this manner. The people of this nation do not desire an Absolute Monarchy foisted upon them or a Dictatorship, which is the same thing, for no King of history has ever wielded the powers possessed by Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin. A rose by another name would be just as sweet and so a King by any other name, is still a King.

The paragraphers of today like to talk about the "Twilight of Kings" and say, with more or less sympathy for the Fuehrer, that the Kingdom of Great Britain will soon pass.

No, as long as humans live upon this earth, the strong-man—the Koenig—The Can Man as Carlyle calls him, will always aspire to rule, absolutely, and without question on the part of his subjects, and so I fear me the President of these United States has aspirations to be the "Can Man" of all history.

The Great Game Of Politics

Painful Fiscal Facts

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.

THERE is so much passion about the defense program and so much partisanship and prejudice linked with the political campaign that it is not surprising people, generally, lose sight of the less spectacular, but none the less basic, facts connected with the national security. The popular blindness to the facts is largely promoted by what appears to be the fixed Administration policy of ignoring them.

FOR example, having obtained from Congress authorization for approximately $11,000,000,000 for defense, there is a decided disposition to assume that it is not necessary to think about anything except spending these billions as speedily as possible. The whole emphasis is upon pouring them out. The question of how the money is to be raised is given scant consideration. Either it is brushed aside altogether or is touched upon in a vague and desultory way.

THE first essential, it is declared, is to get contracts signed and work under way. Of course, there is a good deal in that argument, but hardly enough to justify such complete indifference to the matter of who is going to pay the bill and how and with what. Those points are treated as inconsequential. No questions are asked concerning them at the White House press conference; no information is volunteered. Yet no man capable of coherent thought can fail to realize that there is the utmost peril for all of us in rushing ahead without taking certain elemental steps to guard against the undermining of the national credit and to buttress the Federal financial structure against the tremendous strain about to be imposed.

UP to date not only has nothing been done along that line but no thought has been given to doing anything. The nation's credit is about to be strained as it has not been strained before. It is true that the purpose for which the strain is being imposed is endorsed by practically everybody in the country. But that makes it all the more necessary to protect the people. That would seem to impose a bigger obligation not to take advantage of their confidence. But, apparently, the only plan the Government has is to continue its practice of selling its bonds to the banks, already choked with Government securities. All competent authorities agree that indefinite continuation of this practice is a menace to national credit and bank solvency which easily can lead to depreciation of the currency by the issuance of flat money with which to redeem the Government securities—in brief, to the cruder form of inflation.

BEYOND doubt the new tax bill will increase revenues to some extent, but it is conceded to be a half-baked and wholly inadequate measure. More and heavier taxes will have to be imposed next year, regardless of who is elected President, and the people generally are reconciled to the inevitability of these. In fact, there has been evinced a rather extraordinary public willingness to make the necessary sacrifices—a willingness which should have shamed the politicians who refrained from suggesting any new taxes before the election for fear of the political effect.

YET it is quite obvious that the task of preserving the national credit under the strain of an additional eleven billions of debt cannot be accomplished through taxes alone. All the financial experts insist that to meet fifty per cent. of the defense expenses by tax revenue would be the extreme possible limit. To go beyond that limit means empty houses and bankruptcies which would destroy the source of income. Already estimated governmental taxes approximate twenty-eight per cent. of our national income. Without killing business, confiscating property and imperiling our whole economic system, taxation cannot be pushed beyond a certain limit. And that limit will not produce the money to pay this bill.

WHAT, then, is the answer? It would seem that everyone would know it to be reduction in governmental costs. That steps in that direction have not been taken and are not planned is hard to understand. Nevertheless, the only proposed step—the one embodied in the Byrd resolution for a ten per cent. cut all down the line—was scuttled by the Administration forces in the Senate six weeks ago. Today retrenchment is not even discussed. A nation which for ten years has been living far beyond its means now proposes to add eleven billions to a debt already higher than seems safe without tightening its belt a notch. And the party in power in the platform
